Dulles Hints Big Four Conference Possible

January Parley In Berlin Seen

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles hinted strongly today the United States will accept Russia's bid for an early meeting of the Big Four foreign ministers in Berlin.

"We approach a possible meeting with the representatives of the Soviet Union," he told a congressional committee.

Dulles spoke about the same time that Foreign Minister Anthony Eden was telling the British House of Commons he has "every reason to believe" the United States shares his hope an early conference can be arranged.

State Department press officer Lincoln White underscored Dulles' remarks today as the latest reflection of the American government's official view toward an East-West cold war meeting.

West Berlin Parley Seen

In Germany, British and French officials said informally that all signs pointed to a Big Four session being held in West Berlin late in January.

Dulles' comments came as he wound up testimony before a special House committee investigating Russia's seizure of the three Baltic states of Latvia, Lithuania and Estonia.

He gave advance notice that the United States will adopt a tough attitude in dealing with Russia's Foreign Minister Molotov in the event a satisfactory basis for a conference can be found.

"I can assure you," Dulles said, "that we welcome opportunities to settle specific disputes between us; to end the race in armament, particularly atomic armament, and to reduce the risk of war.

Change Of View Hinted

"But let me also assure you of this," he said. "We do not look upon the conference table as a place where we surrender our principles, but rather as a place for making our principles prevail."

His broad hint, however, that the United States might agree to Russia's invitation contrasted rather sharply with official State Department comment on Moscow's bid last Friday. At that time, the department labeled Russia's note "disappointing" and said it represented another Soviet move to block French approval of the proposed unified European army.

Ex-Gov. Sigler Of Michigan Dies In Plane Crash

BATTLE CREEK, Mich., Nov. 30 (AP)—Former Gov. Kim Sigler and three companions were killed late today in a spectacular plane crash. A coroner identified Sigler as one of the victims.

Sigler's private plane, which he piloted himself, rammed into either the top of a 540-foot television tower or a guy wire supporting it, sailed out of control for three-quarters of a mile, crashed into a woods and burned. One wing was ripped off the plane by the impact.

Was On Business Trip

The other victims were believed to be his secretary, Mrs. Ruth Prentiss, her sister, Mrs. Virginia Schuyler, 28, and Mrs. Schuyler's husband, Harold, 37.

Sigler, a 59-year-old one-time prosecutor who rocketed to the top of state politics and the governor's chair in 1946, had been on a business trip to New Orleans. He had called his law office in nearby Lansing only an hour before the crash to say he was on his last leg of the flight home in his four-passenger plane.

TV Tower Topples Over

The television tower toppled over a few minutes after the crash and smashed through the roof of the transmitter building. The tower, that of Battle Creek UHF station WBCK-TV, is near Augusta, eight miles northeast of here.

Sigler, a Republican, was governor for one two-year term in 1947-48. Then he was defeated by the present Democratic governor, G. Mennen Williams, who has held the office since then.

Dulles Assures Captive Nations

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Secretary of State Dulles assured Soviet-enslaved nations today that Americans never will bargain away their chances for freedom just to gain "illusory safety for ourselves."

Soviet despotism, Dulles said, "cannot indefinitely perpetuate its rule over hundreds of millions of people who love God, who love their country and who have a sense of personal dignity."

While the secretary suggested no specific steps for liberating countries behind the Iron Curtain, he did say:

"The captive peoples should know that they are not forgotten, that we are not prepared to seek illusory safety for ourselves by a bargain with their masters which would confirm their captivity."

Dulles was the first witness before a special House committee set up to investigate Russia's seizure and subsequent treatment of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia. Chairman Kersten (R-Wis) said the committee hopes the information it obtains will be used, if Congress wishes, in laying the plight of the Baltic countries before the United Nations.

12 Reported Injured In Erie Train Wreck

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30 (AP)—Two Erie Railroad trains collided head-on here tonight, police said, and about 12 persons were reported injured.

The police said four ambulances and a fire truck were sent to the scene of the crash on the Newark branch line here.

A local train from Jersey City smashed into a Chicago-Jersey City train at 6:30 p.m., the railroad reported.

There was no immediate reports of any fatalities and it was not known if the injured were hurt seriously.

New Yorkers Left Without Major Paper

Publication Halted By Herald Tribune At Strike Continues

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP) — The Herald Tribune suspended publication tonight, leaving New York without a major newspaper for the first time in its publishing history. Newsstands throughout the city were all but bare.

The city's six other big newspapers — three morning and three afternoon — already were closed tight by a two-day strike of AFL photo-engravers, the first major tieup in the industry in eight years.

Out-of-town newspapers were in hot demand as more than five million daily newspaper readers scrambled for a shred of published news in New York — where more papers are sold every day than anywhere in the world outside of London.

Not Target Of Strike

Although not a target of the wage strike, the Herald Tribune quit in sympathy with its rivals even as type was being set for its Tuesday morning editions.

The newspaper said it sympathized with truce efforts of rival publishers and would not let itself be used as a lever to force a strike settlement on harried competitors.

The Herald Tribune's announcement quoted an unidentified strike leader as saying:

"If the Herald Tribune is publishing and the Times is closed, it won't stay closed long."

Giant Presses Stilled

The Times and the Herald Tribune compete in the conservative circulation field against the mass circulation morning tabloids, the Daily News and the Mirror. There was no comment from the other papers on the Herald Tribune suspension.

Giant presses of the New York Times were stilled Sunday for the first time in 102 years of uninterrupted publication. In the afternoon field, the New York Post missed scheduled editions Saturday for the first time in its 152 years.

The Herald Tribune last night boosted its press run to 2½ million copies and had the newsstands virtually to itself today.

Democrats' High Command Again Blasts Brownell

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Democratic high command cut loose with a new blast at Atty. Gen. Brownell tonight even as the Senate Judiciary Committee prepared to investigate charges that Brownell refused to provide FBI aid in a Denver jury-tampering case.

Clayton Fritchey, deputy chairman of the Democratic National Committee, fired a three-way barrage at Brownell in a radio broadcast accusing the attorney general of injecting the FBI into politics and "pulling it out of crime-busting."

Fritchey said he based his latest accusations on these published reports:

1. A federal judge's criticism of the Justice Department for refusing FBI help in the Denver jury-tampering case, which later was successfully prosecuted with the aid of Treasury agents.

2. A St. Louis federal judge's unanswered appeal to Brownell for more help from the Justice Department in a grand jury's investigation of labor union racketeering.

3. Statements by Republican Representatives Clare Hoffman of Michigan and Wint Smith of Kansas that "pressure" was exerted to halt a congressional investigation of racketeering in New York.

Fritchey said he thinks FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover was "distressed" at being brought into the sensational Harry Dexter White "spy" case as a witness before the Senate Internal Security subcommittee.

"The Democrats never once brought the FBI into partisan politics," Fritchey said, "but it was brought into politics on Nov. 17 before the Jenner Committee. We Democrats regret it and hope the FBI can be pulled back out of politics."

U.S. Condemns Red Atrocities

Lodge Says 35,000 Men, Women Died

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 30 (AP)—Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. charged today that 38,000 U.N. soldiers and Korean civilians were victims of a conscious policy of "wholesale brutality" laid down by world communism. He said most of the victims died.

"It is my personal conviction that over 35,000 of these are dead," Lodge said later.

The chief American delegate charged before the General Assembly that Russian officers headed the command of prison camps in North Korea in which thousands of prisoners of war were slain by inhuman and atrocious means.

Most of the Assembly delegates sat in shocked silence as the chief American delegate opened the debate on the question of atrocities which the United States raised a month ago.

Resolution Offered

Lodge introduced a resolution proposing that the Assembly:

1. Express "its grave concern at reports and information that North Korean and Chinese Communist forces have, in a large number of instances, employed inhuman practices against the heroic soldiers of forces under the United Nations Command in Korea and against the civilian population of Korea;"

2. Condemn "the commission by any governments or authorities of murder, mutilation, torture, and other atrocity acts against captured military personnel or civilian population, as a violation of rules of international law and basic standards of conduct and morality and as affronting human rights and dignity and worth of the human person."

Britain, France, Australia and Turkey, all with soldiers in Korea, joined the United States in presenting this resolution.

Pole Hurls Counter Charge

Poland's Deputy Foreign Minister Marian Naszkowski reacted quickly, however, with a counter charge that the United States rulers want to "wash off the stains of guilt" for Korean bombings by American planes and for waging germ warfare. He said the United States is waging a hate campaign against the Chinese and North Koreans.

Naszkowski said the atrocity charges were brought up at this time to help the U. S. government gain support for its arms race.

The sponsors did not ask for a commission of investigation, assuming it would be stopped by the Bamboo Curtain. American representatives also said they were certain that the evidence produced by the United States Department of Defense proved the case beyond dispute.

Sudan Election Result Challenged By Losers

KHARTOUM, Sudan, Nov. 30 (AP)—The UMMA Independence party, which lost heavily to the pro-Egyptian National Unionists in the Sudan's first parliamentary elections, declared tonight it will not recognize the results of the balloting.

A statement signed by the party's leader, Saddik El Mahdi, said UMMA will take "practical steps necessitated by the Sudan's interests." It did not specify what these steps will be.

Britain Knocks King Of Buganda Off His Throne

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Britain booted the 29-year-old King of Buganda off his throne today for insisting upon a definite date for independence within the British Commonwealth for his 900,000 subjects. The King opposed also the British plan for a federation of East African territories.

A state of emergency was declared in Buganda province, the largest and most important in Uganda, Britain's rich cotton-producing protectorate in East Africa.

Cambridge-educated King Mutesa II, ordered into exile, was reported flying to London.

It was the second time in recent weeks that Britain had cracked down in one of her outlying territories. Britain removed Premier Cheddi Jagan in British Guiana in South America early last month on charges Japan's leftist party sought to turn the colony into a Communist state.

There was no question of communism in Uganda, long considered a model for tribal government in the administration of Britain's far-flung possessions.

But Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton, disclosing in the House of Commons the action taken against the King, charged the young monarch with refusal to cooperate with the British administration.

Tax Canvass Pays Off

BOSTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—An Internal Revenue Service canvass of homes and business establishments in the six New England states from July through Nov. 13 added $1,186,413 to the U. S. Treasury, regional commissioner W. A. Gallahan said today.

Dry Weed 'Arrow' Blamed For Death Of Kentucky Boy

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 30 (AP)—A tiny wound inflicted by a playmate using a dried weed as an arrow was blamed today for the death of 6-year-old Robert Lee Mitchell.

Neighbors reported the boy received the slight wound near the tempie while playing with other children Friday. That night he complained of a headache and an inability to open his mouth. He died the next day.

Churchill Works On 79th Birthday

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Durable Winston Churchill chalked up his 79th birthday today, but for Britain's "Grand Old Man" it was mostly just another working day in his quest for lasting world peace.

Scorning a holiday, the Prime Minister summoned his Cabinet to discuss the coming Bermuda conference and Russia's offer to attend Big Four talks; dropped in on a cheering House of Commons, and planned to wind things up at a midnight champagne and rum cake reception for 100 guests.

All day long, visitors and messengers called at 10 Downing St., the Prime Minister's official residence, to deliver birthday gifts and some 2,500 messages from all over the world, including cables from touring Queen Elizabeth II and President Eisenhower. The American President, an old wartime friend of Churchill's who will meet him Friday at the Big Three conference in Bermuda, cabled:

"My best wishes for a cheerful celebration, and many more years of happiness and contentment. Looking forward to seeing you soon."

Crooner Haymes Fails To Appear For Hearing

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30 (AP) — Crooner Dick Haymes failed to appear for a deportation hearing today and his $500 bond may be forfeited by the Immigration Service.

David Marcus, attorney representing the singer, asked for a continuance but Herman R. Landon, district immigration director, said the continuance was denied.

Haymes' attorneys hope to have the case postponed until after the holidays and also have it transferred to New York on appeal directly to the Immigration Service in Washington.

Haymes, 34, was arrested last Aug. 6 as a native of Argentina who obtained exemption from World War II military service as a neutral alien, thus becoming ineligible for American citizenship.

Benson Warns Against Slash In Farm Output

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Benson declared today that rigid price supports and companion production controls for farm products could bring unemployment among non-farmers and "terrific repercussions in our entire economy."

In criticizing current federal agricultural programs, the GOP farm chief asked farmers to recognize that the effects of reduced agricultural output do not stop with the producer himself.

"Actually," he said, "the number of people who earn all or part of their daily living through transporting, processing, packaging and merchandising of products of our farms exceed those actually engaged in agriculture itself.

"An over-all reduction in farm output can have terrific repercussions in our entire economy," he said.

Benson offered this criticism of present farm programs in a speech prepared for the national 4-H club congress.

Improvements Promised

He promised that the Eisenhower administration will offer to Congress proposed improvements which, he said, "will help farmers gain full parity of price and income in our market places — rather than some fraction of parity in a government warehouse," as well as enlarged markets.

By parity he meant a standard for measuring farm prices, declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices they pay. Present law requires the government to support major crops at 90 per cent of parity.

Didn't Look Both Ways

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 30 (AP)—A 29-year-old man forgot to look both ways last night before smashing a jewelry store window.

Two policemen were just a short distance down the street. They nabbed the culprit and said he already had pocketed $14 worth of display merchandise.

Explanations To S. Koreans Slated Today

Interviews With 22 Americans To Start Within Two Weeks

PANMUNJOM, Tuesday, Dec. 1 (AP)—The United Nations Command said today it wants to start explanations tomorrow to 328 South Korean prisoners of war listed by the Reds as refusing repatriation.

The Allies did not immediately ask for the start of explanations to the 22 Americans and 1 Briton held in the same camp by neutral Indian guards. A spokesman said interviews with those non-Koreans would start in about 11 days.

The Allied plan was sent to the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission by Brig. Gen. A. L. Hamblen, chief of the U. N. repatriation group.

Hamblen said he would like the talks to the 324 South Korean men and four South Korean women to start at 9 a.m. tomorrow (7 p.m. Tuesday, EST) and continue until 4:30 p.m. with an hour and a half break for lunch.

NNRC rules specify that requests for prisoner explanations must be delivered by 10 a.m. of the preceding day.

Approval Is Formality

NNRC approval was expected to be only a formality.

It had been predicted for nearly a month that Allied efforts to persuade prisoners to return home would begin early in December.

Hamblen said he expects the U. N. explainers to talk to 30 South Koreans a day. At this rate it would take about 11 days to interview all 328 of them. Talks with the Americans and the lone Briton would start immediately afterward —only some 11 days from the expiration of the 90-day explanation period.

Originally there were 359 prisoners held in the Communist-built camp for Allied POWs in the neutral zone. These included 335 South Koreans including 5 women, 2 Americans and 1 British Marine.

One American Returned

Since then 6 South Koreans, including 1 woman, and 1 American Cpl. Edward Dickenson of Cracers Neck, Va., voluntarily returned without explanations.

Another South Korean escaped and has not been found.

Whether the prisoners will come willingly to hear the Allied explanation team was not known.

At various times Chinese and North Korean prisoners have refused to budge and the NNRC has declined to use force to produce them.

Information from inside the Allied camp is that the prisoners have received instructions from the Reds to attend the explanations at least once. Prisoner leaders reportedly have told indoctrinated fellow POWs to argue with the explainers, accusing them of "imperialism, war mongering and starting the Korean War."

Former Patient Kills Top Heart Specialist

DETROIT, Nov. 30 (AP) — Dr. Edward Spalding, one of the nation's leading heart specialists, was shot to death on a downtown Detroit street corner tonight.

Police seized John Sherpack, 51, a one-time patient of Spalding's, near the shooting scene, a half hour after the slaying.

Dr. Spalding, regarded by medical men as one of the six top heart men in the nation, was dead on arrival at receiving hospital.

Probe Set Of Charges FBI Aid Denied In Jury-Meddling Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Chairman Langer (R-ND) announced today the Senate Judiciary Committee will promptly investigate charges that Atty. Gen. Brownell refused to provide FBI aid in a Denver jury-tampering case.

The Denver incident took on national significance yesterday when the Democratic National Committee raised it as an offshoot to the explosive Harry Dexter White "spy" controversy.

Langer said his committee will begin hearings in Denver on Dec. 12.

He said the committee wants to find out why the U. S. attorney for Colorado, a Democrat who won the jury-meddling case without FBI help, was fired and replaced by a Republican fraternity brother of Brownell.

Along with this development, the Senate Internal Security subcommittee under Chairman Jenner (R-Ind) moved to broaden its inquiry into Brownell's charges of Communist-coddling during the Truman administration.

Jenner's group, a unit of the Judiciary Committee, subpoenaed William Ludwig Ullman, a former Treasury official cited in FBI reports as an alleged Soviet spy, to testify Wednesday.

Specifically, the subcommittee wants to find out why Ullman was permitted to remain in his Treasury job for more than 16 months after the FBI advised the Truman administration that he might be a spy.

Meanwhile, Jenner's subcommittee pushed its inquiry into one phase of the "Russian spy" case by subpoenaing Ullman, but met an apparent rebuff in its efforts to question Igor Gouzenko, Canada's prize informant on Soviet espionage operations in North America.

Gouzenko said in an interview copyrighted by the Toronto Telegram that he had decided to "choose safety" rather than risk exposure of his long-hidden secret identity and would not let the Jenner subcommittee interview him.

All But Four Auto Makers Now Producing '54 Models

DETROIT, Nov. 30 (AP)—All but four of the nation's auto makers now are in production of 1954 model cars.

The four—Ford Division, Cadillac, Oldsmobile and Kaiser Motors—begin making their 1954 cars in December. Their introductions probably will not come until some time in January, along with several others.

Reports have had it that Cadillac and Oldsmobile, like Buick, plan major styling changes. Industry gossip has credited Buick with an entirely new line of cars in its 1954 program, including a new series and a new V-8 engine in its so-called special series.

The special series is Buick's lowest price model. It has been powered with a straight eight engine.

Chevrolet, largest of the world's car makers which has been in production of its 1954 models for a couple of weeks, will introduce its 1954 cars on Dec. 18. Because of the keen competition between Chevrolet and Ford, the price tags to go on the 1954 Chevrolet line will be of major interest.

The Ford price schedules will not be announced until the new models are introduced in January.

There hasn't been any suggestion of a price war between these two leading producers. But Chevrolet's price tags could have a far reaching effect on the industry's entire 1954 pricing program.

Some of the smaller companies that already have introduced 1954 models, have announced both reductions and increases.

Churchill To Pick Up Check For Big Three Conference

TUCKER'S TOWN, Bermuda, Nov. 30 (AP)—President Eisenhower and French Premier Laniel will live in luxury at Bermuda's swank Mid-Ocean Club during the Big-Three conference, and British Prime Minister Churchill will pick up the check.

Foreign Office sources declined to speculate today how much it will cost Britain just to house, feed and entertain its distinguished foreign guests and their staffs during their stay. But travel people and hotel men estimated the total will be at least 80,000 pounds ($224,000), probably more.

This will include club rental, food, a chartered aircraft, and special army units to do the honors.

While everything will be on the house for Eisenhower and Laniel so far as putting them up is concerned, that does not mean that their governments won't have to shell out anything for the conference. There is the problem of getting the two government heads and their sizable staffs to and from Bermuda.

In addition to expenses borne by the home government, Bermuda's colonial Parliament last week appropriated 17,500 pounds ($49,000) to pay for such items as construction of sentry boxes, barbed wire fences, installation of floodlights at Mid-Ocean, and mobilization of special constabulary.

One problem now happily solved was how to reconcile Churchill's late-to-bed habits with Eisenhower's early rising. Officials in charge of the arrangements decided to keep the kitchen's staff on duty 24 hours a day.

U.S. Condemns Red Atrocities

Lodge Says 35,000 Men, Women Died

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., Nov. 30 (AP)—Henry Cabot Lodge Jr. charged today that 38,000 U.N. soldiers and Korean civilians were victims of a conscious policy of "wholesale brutality" laid down by world communism. He said most of the victims died.

"It is my personal conviction that over 35,000 of these are dead," Lodge said later.

The chief American delegate charged before the General Assembly that Russian officers headed the command of prison camps in North Korea in which thousands of prisoners of war were slain by inhuman and atrocious means.

Most of the Assembly delegates sat in shocked silence as the chief American delegate opened the debate on the question of atrocities which the United States raised a month ago.

Resolution Offered

Lodge introduced a resolution proposing that the Assembly:

1. Express "its grave concern at reports and information that North Korean and Chinese Communist forces have, in a large number of instances, employed inhuman practices against the heroic soldiers of forces under the United Nations Command in Korea and against the civilian population of Korea;"

2. Condemn "the commission by any governments or authorities of murder, mutilation, torture, and other atrocity acts against captured military personnel or civilian population, as a violation of rules of international law and basic standards of conduct and morality and as affronting human rights and dignity and worth of the human person."

Britain, France, Australia and Turkey, all with soldiers in Korea, joined the United States in presenting this resolution.

Pole Hurls Counter Charge

Poland's Deputy Foreign Minister Marian Naszkowski reacted quickly, however, with a counter charge that the United States rulers want to "wash off the stains of guilt" for Korean bombings by American planes and for waging germ warfare. He said the United States is waging a hate campaign against the Chinese and North Koreans.

Naszkowski said the atrocity charges were brought up at this time to help the U. S. government gain support for its arms race.

The sponsors did not ask for a commission of investigation, assuming it would be stopped by the Bamboo Curtain. American representatives also said they were certain that the evidence produced by the United States Department of Defense proved the case beyond dispute.

Sudan Election Result Challenged By Losers

KHARTOUM, Sudan, Nov. 30 (AP)—The UMMA Independence party, which lost heavily to the pro-Egyptian National Unionists in the Sudan's first parliamentary elections, declared tonight it will not recognize the results of the balloting.

A statement signed by the party's leader, Saddik El Mahdi, said UMMA will take "practical steps necessitated by the Sudan's interests." It did not specify what these steps will be.

Gerald Lefebvre, Waterford, N. Y., who will be 13 in February, lays claim to being the youngest Eagle Scout in the Boy Scouts of America. This family joshing took place in preparation for last night's ceremony honoring Gerald and other new Eagle Scouts.

Britain Knocks King Of Buganda Off His Throne

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Britain booted the 29-year-old King of Buganda off his throne today for insisting upon a definite date for independence within the British Commonwealth for his 900,000 subjects. The King opposed also the British plan for a federation of East African territories.

A state of emergency was declared in Buganda province, the largest and most important in Uganda, Britain's rich cotton-producing protectorate in East Africa.

Cambridge-educated King Mutesa II, ordered into exile, was reported flying to London.

It was the second time in recent weeks that Britain had cracked down in one of her outlying territories. Britain removed Premier Cheddi Jagan in British Guiana in South America early last month on charges Japan's leftist party sought to turn the colony into a Communist state.

There was no question of communism in Uganda, long considered a model for tribal government in the administration of Britain's far-flung possessions.

But Colonial Secretary Oliver Lyttelton, disclosing in the House of Commons the action taken against the King, charged the young monarch with refusal to cooperate with the British administration.

Tax Canvass Pays Off

BOSTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—An Internal Revenue Service canvass of homes and business establishments in the six New England states from July through Nov. 13 added $1,186,413 to the U. S. Treasury, regional commissioner W. A. Gallahan said today.

Dry Weed 'Arrow' Blamed For Death Of Kentucky Boy

PARIS, Ky., Nov. 30 (AP)—A tiny wound inflicted by a playmate using a dried weed as an arrow was blamed today for the death of 6-year-old Robert Lee Mitchell.

Neighbors reported the boy received the slight wound near the tempie while playing with other children Friday. That night he complained of a headache and an inability to open his mouth. He died the next day.

Churchill Works On 79th Birthday

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Durable Winston Churchill chalked up his 79th birthday today, but for Britain's "Grand Old Man" it was mostly just another working day in his quest for lasting world peace.

Scorning a holiday, the Prime Minister summoned his Cabinet to discuss the coming Bermuda conference and Russia's offer to attend Big Four talks; dropped in on a cheering House of Commons, and planned to wind things up at a midnight champagne and rum cake reception for 100 guests.

All day long, visitors and messengers called at 10 Downing St., the Prime Minister's official residence, to deliver birthday gifts and some 2,500 messages from all over the world, including cables from touring Queen Elizabeth II and President Eisenhower. The American President, an old wartime friend of Churchill's who will meet him Friday at the Big Three conference in Bermuda, cabled:

"My best wishes for a cheerful celebration, and many more years of happiness and contentment. Looking forward to seeing you soon."

Benson Warns Against Slash In Farm Output

CHICAGO, Nov. 30 (AP)—Secretary of Agriculture Benson declared today that rigid price supports and companion production controls for farm products could bring unemployment among non-farmers and "terrific repercussions in our entire economy."

In criticizing current federal agricultural programs, the GOP farm chief asked farmers to recognize that the effects of reduced agricultural output do not stop with the producer himself.

"Actually," he said, "the number of people who earn all or part of their daily living through transporting, processing, packaging and merchandising of products of our farms exceed those actually engaged in agriculture itself.

"An over-all reduction in farm output can have terrific repercussions in our entire economy," he said.

Benson offered this criticism of present farm programs in a speech prepared for the national 4-H club congress.

Improvements Promised

He promised that the Eisenhower administration will offer to Congress proposed improvements which, he said, "will help farmers gain full parity of price and income in our market places — rather than some fraction of parity in a government warehouse," as well as enlarged markets.

By parity he meant a standard for measuring farm prices, declared by law to be fair to farmers in relation to prices they pay. Present law requires the government to support major crops at 90 per cent of parity.

Didn't Look Both Ways

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 30 (AP)—A 29-year-old man forgot to look both ways last night before smashing a jewelry store window.

Two policemen were just a short distance down the street. They nabbed the culprit and said he already had pocketed $14 worth of display merchandise.

Explanations To S. Koreans Slated Today

Interviews With 22 Americans To Start Within Two Weeks

PANMUNJOM, Tuesday, Dec. 1 (AP)—The United Nations Command said today it wants to start explanations tomorrow to 328 South Korean prisoners of war listed by the Reds as refusing repatriation.

The Allies did not immediately ask for the start of explanations to the 22 Americans and 1 Briton held in the same camp by neutral Indian guards. A spokesman said interviews with those non-Koreans would start in about 11 days.

The Allied plan was sent to the Neutral Nations Repatriation Commission by Brig. Gen. A. L. Hamblen, chief of the U. N. repatriation group.

Hamblen said he would like the talks to the 324 South Korean men and four South Korean women to start at 9 a.m. tomorrow (7 p.m. Tuesday, EST) and continue until 4:30 p.m. with an hour and a half break for lunch.

NNRC rules specify that requests for prisoner explanations must be delivered by 10 a.m. of the preceding day.

Approval Is Formality

NNRC approval was expected to be only a formality.

It had been predicted for nearly a month that Allied efforts to persuade prisoners to return home would begin early in December.

Hamblen said he expects the U. N. explainers to talk to 30 South Koreans a day. At this rate it would take about 11 days to interview all 328 of them. Talks with the Americans and the lone Briton would start immediately afterward—only some 11 days from the expiration of the 90-day explanation period.

Originally there were 359 prisoners held in the Communist-built camp for Allied POWs in the neutral zone. These included 335 South Koreans including 5 women, 23 Americans and 1 British Marine.

One American Returned

Since then 6 South Koreans, including 1 woman, and 1 American, Cpl. Edward Dickenson of Crackers Neck, Va., voluntarily returned without explanations.

Another South Korean escaped and has not been found.

Whether the prisoners will come willingly to hear the Allied explanation team was not known.

At various times Chinese and North Korean prisoners have refused to budge and the NNRC has declined to use force to produce them.

Information from inside the Allied camp is that the prisoners have received instructions from the Reds to attend the explanations at least once. Prisoner leaders reportedly have told indoctrinated fellow POWs to argue with the explainers, accusing them of "imperialism, war mongering and starting the Korean War."

Former Patient Kills Top Heart Specialist

DETROIT, Nov. 30 (AP) — Dr. Edward Spalding, one of the nation's leading heart specialists, was shot to death on a downtown Detroit street corner tonight.

Police seized John Sherpack, 51, a one-time patient of Spalding, near the shooting scene, a half hour after the slaying.

Dr. Spalding, regarded by medical men as one of the six top heart men in the nation, was dead on arrival at receiving hospital.

Probe Set Of Charges FBI Aid Denied In Jury-Meddling Case

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Chairman Langer (R-ND) announced today the Senate Judiciary Committee will promptly investigate charges that Atty. Gen. Brownell refused to provide FBI aid in a Denver jury-tampering case.

The Denver incident took on national significance yesterday when the Democratic National Committee raised it as an offshoot to the explosive Harry Dexter White "spy" controversy.

Langer said his committee will begin hearings in Denver on Dec. 12.

He said the committee wants to find out why the U. S. attorney for Colorado, a Democrat who won the jury-meddling case without FBI help, was fired and replaced by a Republican fraternity brother of Brownell.

Along with this development, the Senate Internal Security subcommittee under Chairman Jenner (R-Ind) moved to broaden its inquiry into Brownell's charges of Communist-coddling during the Truman administration.

Jenner's group, a unit of the Judiciary Committee, subpoenaed William Ludwig Ullman, a former Treasury official cited in FBI reports as an alleged Soviet spy, to testify Wednesday.

Specifically, the subcommittee wants to find out why Ullman was permitted to remain in his Treasury job for more than 16 months after the FBI advised the Truman administration that he might be a spy.

Meanwhile, Jenner's subcommittee pushed its inquiry into one phase of the "Russian spy" case by subpoenaing Ullman, but met an apparent rebuff in its efforts to question Igor Gouzenko, Canada's prize informant on Soviet espionage operations in North America.

Gouzenko said in an interview copyrighted by the Toronto Telegram that he had decided to "choose safety" rather than risk exposure of his long-hidden secret identity and would not let the Jenner subcommittee interview him.

Crooner Haymes Fails To Appear For Hearing

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 30 (AP) — Crooner Dick Haymes failed to appear for a deportation hearing today and his $500 bond may be forfeited by the Immigration Service.

David Marcus, attorney representing the singer, asked for a continuance but Herman R. Landon, district immigration director, said the continuance was denied.

Haymes' attorneys hope to have the case postponed until after the holidays and also have it transferred to New York on appeal directly to the Immigration Service in Washington.

Haymes, 34, was arrested last Aug. 6 as a native of Argentina who obtained exemption from World War II military service as a neutral alien, thus becoming ineligible for American citizenship.

Churchill To Pick Up Check For Big Three Conference

TUCKER'S TOWN, Bermuda, Nov. 30 (AP)—President Eisenhower and French Premier Laniel will live in luxury at Bermuda's swank Mid-Ocean Club during the Big-Three conference, and British Prime Minister Churchill will pick up the check.

Foreign Office sources declined to speculate today how much it will cost Britain just to house, feed and entertain its distinguished foreign guests and their staffs during their stay. But travel people and hotel men estimated the total will be at least 80,000 pounds ($224,000), probably more.

This will include club rental, food, a chartered aircraft, and special army units to do the honors.

While everything will be on the house for Eisenhower and Laniel so far as putting them up is concerned, that does not mean that their governments won't have to shell out anything for the conference. There is the problem of getting the two government heads and their sizable staffs to and from Bermuda.

In addition to expenses borne by the home government, Bermuda's colonial Parliament last week appropriated 17,500 pounds ($49,000) to pay for such items as construction of sentry boxes, barbed wire fences, installation of floodlights at Mid-Ocean, and mobilization of a special constabulary.

One problem now happily solved was how to reconcile Churchill's late-to-bed habits with Eisenhower's early rising. Officials in charge of the arrangements decided to keep the kitchen's staff on duty 24 hours a day.

Court Lacks Grounds To Erase School Segregation, States Claim

Groundwork Laid For Dec. 7 Debate

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP) — Three states—Kansas, South Carolina and Virginia—today told the Supreme Court it has no grounds on which to declare racial segregation in the nation's school unconstitutional.

And the District of Columbia declared it could do nothing about integrating the schools here because Congress itself set up separate systems for the area. District counsel also argued that the principle of dual school systems does not violate civil rights or other guarantees of the Constitution.

Separate briefs filed by the three states and the district apparently completed the groundwork for three days of oral arguments on the historic segregation cases which open before the high tribunal Dec. 7. All principal parties involved have presented their written views which the court requested when it postponed a decision on the school issue last spring.

The high tribunal heard original arguments last year on a series of cases by parents of Negro children in Kansas, South Carolina, Virginia, Delaware and the District of Columbia. They have asked the court to decree that racial segregation in the schools violates the 14th Amendment.

Such a decision would overrule an 1896 Supreme Court ruling which has permitted states to maintain racially segregated school systems provided equal facilities were available for Negroes and whites.

Atty. Gen. Brownell, asking the court last week to outlaw segregation, had said it would require the revision of school laws in at least 17 states.

Leaders in some Southern states have said drastic changes will have to be made in their school systems if the court rules against segregation. Gov. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, who has said such a ruling would lead to bloodshed, won legislative approval last week of provisions for replacing the public schools with state subsidized schools if segregation is outlawed.

In their briefs today, Kansas, South Carolina and Virginia all argued that the framers of the 14th Amendment did not intend it to end school segregation. Kansas and South Carolina declared that federal interference with their schools "is neither necessary nor justified."

BROOKLYN BRIDGE DOWN — A section of the 80-year-old Brooklyn Bridge over the Kentucky River near Harrodsburg, Ky., collapsed yesterday under the weight of a 1½-ton truck. The driver, Eugene Patterson, 26, suffered a back injury. Neither he nor the truck, loaded with margarine, went into the water, which is about 20 feet deep. A warning sign posted on the bridge limited loads to six tons, provided for a five-mile-an-hour speed limit and a 200-foot interval between vehicles.

Supreme Court Backs Minister In Draft Dispute

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP) — A duly ordained minister who works part time on another job in order to make both ends meet doesn't lose his draft exemption, the Supreme Court ruled today.

The court's 6-3 decision was handed down in the case of a Jehovah's Witnesses minister who got a two-year prison sentence for balking at induction into the military service.

Justice Clark, speaking for the majority, said George Lewis Dickinson of San Francisco made out a case for a draft exemption which meets the standards set up in the Selective Service Act.

Clark said Dickinson was denied an exemption because he worked five hours a week as a radio repairman.

"A statutory ban on all secular work would mete out draft exemptions with an uneven hand to the detriment of those who minister to the poor and thus need some secular work in order to survive," Clark wrote.

In another case today the court refused to review a decision of the U.S. Court of Appeals here that the federal Power Commission must fix rates for interstate sales by natural gas companies which produce and gather the gas.

The decision was appealed by the Phillips Petroleum Co. and the states of Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. It overturned a ruling by the power commission that Phillips was not a natural gas company within the meaning of the Natural Gas Act.

Not Sissy For Men To Wear Perfume

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP)—It's not sissy for men to wear perfume, a European fashion expert said today.

Old Movies, Saved By Legal Fluke, Are Reconstructed

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Library of Congress announced today it's now possible to reconstruct some of the earliest motion pictures ever made.

And then it proved its point with a 26-minute display of such early flickers as "The Way to Sell Corsets," the 1907 heavyweight prize fight "Squires vs. Burns," and one of the first newsreels, "The Great Baltimore Fire."

Most people don't realize that almost all the original films disintegrated long ago. The library has copies of many of the old timers only because of a legal fluke.

Naturally, there was no law governing motion pictures before they were invented. But there was a law for photographs. So the early producer who wanted to copyright his film sent in a small photograph of each frame in his picture.

These were filed away and generally forgotten.

But in the last few years Library of Congress officials realized they had something among these 3,500 titles, including pictures of President McKinley making a speech in Buffalo shortly before his assassination, of troop movements in the Spanish-American War, of the steamship Titanic.

The Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences became enthusiastic and helped work out the technical problems. It also reproduced and paid the costs of the films shown today.

Those early film-makers had their problems. The camera was immovable. It was hard to find a story for a film which would run only for a few minutes. Actors were expensive.

So it isn't surprising that many of the early titles are like those on the documentary films of today. Take a look at some of Thomas Alva Edison's early work:

"Arrest in Chinatown, San Francisco," "The Falls of Minnehaha," "Dancing Darkey Boy," "Seattle, Wash., First Avenue."

There were comedies such as "Airy Fairy Lillian Tries on Her New Corset." The word "corset" in the 1890s apparently is comparable to "Brooklyn" today. The mere mention of it produced laughter.

Airy Fairy Lillian was a 400-pound circus fat lady, and getting a corset on her was quite a trick.

Eden Says Britain, U. S. Hope To Meet Russia

LONDON, Nov. 30 (AP)—Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons today Britain and the United States both now hope to meet Russia soon to discuss Germany and Austria.

Eden said the latest Russian note accepting a conference meant the Soviet government was ready to meet Britain, France and the United States without conditions and added:

"It is the hope of her Majesty's government that it will now be possible to arrange a meeting of the four foreign ministers at an early date."

Laborites immediately questioned him.

Herbert Morrison, deputy Labor party leader, asked whether Eden had seen press reports attributed to Secretary of State John Foster Dulles which gave a contrary impression.

"I have naturally had communications from the United States," Eden replied, "and I have every reason to believe that the answer I have just given will be endorsed by the United States government."

Aged Elkton Man Dies In His Blazing Home

ELKTON, Md., Nov. 30 (AP)—A 93-year-old man was burned to death tonight when he climbed to the attic of his three-story frame home after smelling smoke and was trapped when the floor burst into flames.

The house at Pleasants Hill, about 8 miles south of here, where George Scarborough and his wife, Ella, 88, lived alone, was burned to the ground. Mrs. Scarborough escaped unhurt but her husband died in the flames.

27 Plead Guilty In Polygamy Case

KINGMAN, Ariz., Nov. 30 (AP)—Twenty-seven defendants, accused of being the driving force behind the Short Creek multiple marriage cult, pleaded guilty to four charges of conspiracy today.

Similar charges against 69 other defendants — seven men and 62 women—were then dismissed in Mohave County Superior Court.

Judge Robert S. Tullar set next Monday, Dec. 7 for pronouncing sentence.

At that time the 27 could be directed to serve up to one year in prison or pay a $1,000 fine on each of the four counts. They also could be given suspended sentences.

The developments were writing a final chapter to the story that began with a pre-dawn raid against the tiny Short Creek community, astride the Arizona-Utah border, last July 26.

A task force of Arizona police enveloped the town from north and south and seized virtually every man, woman and child.

The adults were charged with conspiracy to commit adultery, bigamy, open and notorious cohabitation, contributing to the delinquency of minors, marrying the spouse of another and statutory rape.

Upon recommendation of the state today, the counts of contributing and statutory rape were stricken.

The charges were based on 26 months of secret investigation of the colony. Some of the men were accused of having as many as six wives.

Communists Refused Radio-Television Time

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP)—Three major networks said today they had turned down requests from the Communist party and the Daily Worker for time to answer the recent television speech of Sen. Joseph McCarthy (R-Wis).

NBC announced its action late today. CBS and ABC later disclosed they had taken similar action.

Officials of other networks and stations involved could not be reached.

McCarthy's speech last Tuesday night was broadcast on free radio and television time granted by major networks.

"I have naturally had communications from the United States," Eden replied, "and I have every reason to believe that the answer I have just given will be endorsed by the United States government."

27 Plead Guilty In Polygamy Case

KINGMAN, Ariz., Nov. 30 (AP)—Twenty-seven defendants, accused of being the driving force behind the Short Creek multiple marriage cult, pleaded guilty to four charges of conspiracy today.

Similar charges against 69 other defendants — seven men and 62 women—were then dismissed in Mohave County Superior Court.

Judge Robert S. Tullar set next Monday, Dec. 7 for pronouncing sentence.

At that time the 27 could be directed to serve up to one year in prison or pay a $1,000 fine on each of the four counts. They also could be given suspended sentences.

The developments were writing a final chapter to the story that began with a pre-dawn raid against the tiny Short Creek community, astride the Arizona-Utah border, last July 26.

A task force of Arizona police enveloped the town from north and south and seized virtually every man, woman and child.

The adults were charged with conspiracy to commit adultery, bigamy, open and notorious cohabitation, contributing to the delinquency of minors, marrying the spouse of another and statutory rape.

Upon recommendation of the state today, the counts of contributing and statutory rape were stricken.

The charges were based on 26 months of secret investigation of the colony. Some of the men were accused of having as many as six wives.

Officials of other networks and stations involved could not be reached.

McCarthy's speech last Tuesday night was broadcast on free radio and television time granted by major networks.

Grand Jury Will Scan Morals Trial Testimony For Perjury

Young D'Alesandro's Statements Involved

BALTIMORE, Nov. 30 (AP)—Chief Judge W. Conwell Smith today ordered sent to the Grand Jury transcripts of testimony of the son of Baltimore's mayor and three other defendants in a series of morals trials to determine whether perjury has been committed.

The mayor's son, Franklin Roosevelt D'Alesandro, 20, was found innocent of statutory rape several weeks ago. His case and that of 13 other defendants involves two girls, 11 and 13 at the time of the alleged offenses last summer.

Nine other defendants have been convicted of either rape, a technical charge because of the ages of the girls, or perversion.

On trial today was George H. Baccala, 24. Judge Smith ordered transcripts of his testimony and that of Philip Sudano, 18, sent to the Grand Jury for comparison with testimony given by D'Alesandro, who swore he never saw the two girls before.

Sudano refused to testify at D'Alesandro's trial, but today both he and Baccala swore that they and the mayor's son rode around town with the girls in a car before taking them to an apartment.

Testimony of Sudano's cousin, Michael, older by a few years, was also ordered sent to the Grand Jury for study.

Philip Sudano refused to testify at D'Alesandro's trial, but today both he and his cousin and Baccala swore that they and the mayor's son rode around town with the girls in a car before taking them to an apartment.

They also testified that at one time during the evening, they stopped at the D'Alesandro home for cold drinks while the girls waited outside in the car.

Other members of the D'Alesandro family were away at the time. Young D'Alesandro testified at his trial that in his parents' absence he stayed at the home of his fiancee's father.

All of the convicted defendants have asked for new trials, causing deferment of sentencing.

Baccala, who is pleading innocent, is being tried before an all-male jury. His trial continues tomorrow.

When court adjourned late today, Judge Smith said:

"I direct the state's attorney to call the attention of the Grand Jury to the testimony of this defendant and the testimony of Philip Sudano and Michael Sudano and to show it the transcript of the testimony of Roosevelt D'Alesandro and to ask it to determine if a charge of perjury shall be made."

It involves a six-cent wage increase in return for a year's extension of their contract.

Officers On Way To Florida To Get Confessed Killer

CAMBRIDGE, Md., Nov. 30 (AP)—Maryland officers left for Florida today to get 26-year-old Harvey L. Northrup, former convict quoted there as admitting the slaying of a Cambridge truck driver.

Northrup, from Federalsburg, Md., decided not to contest his removal to Maryland when he was arraigned before a county judge at Fernandina Beach, Fla., where he was captured Saturday.

Sheriff Waldo Robinson of Dorchester County and State Trooper William Zumbrun left for Florida to get Northrup as soon as they learned he had agreed to waive extradition.

They are due to pick up him Wednesday and probably will get back here sometime Friday.

Northrup, who also has been a patient at two state mental hospitals, is charged with the murder Nov. 19 of Howard Lee Coleman, 31, driver for a Cambridge hardware store.

Coleman told police before he died that he picked up an acquaintance he knew only as "Blackie," they drank together for a while at a Federalsburg tavern, and the man shot him when they stopped on the road back to Cambridge.

Sheriff H. J. Youngblood said at Fernandina Beach today Northrup had admitted the slaying.

Board Demands Rockville Sewer System Overhaul

BALTIMORE, Nov. 30 (AP) — The State Board of Health served a formal order on the Mayor and Council of Rockville today demanding they take action to provide adequate sewage disposal facilities.

The town's overloaded disposal plant on Watts Branch is "a menace to health," the board declared.

State experts said it was pumping as much as 300 per cent more sewage than it was designed to handle. Some of the treatment processes are by-passed in order to handle the load.

The state board's order directed the mayor and council to file plans, specifications and contracts by June 1, 1954, for correcting the trouble. It also set a July 1, 1955, deadline for having the overhauled system in operation.

State law provides a $10 to $500 fine for failure to comply with such an order. Additional fines of $5 to $50 a day also are provided as long as the requirements are not met.

The real teeth in the board's action, however, was an order that no more houses or other buildings shall be connected with the sewer system connected with the disposal plant until its deficiencies are corrected. Parts of Rockville not connected with the disposal plant are not involved.

The effective date of the ban is next Jan. 31 and it meant the delay of plans to build a 1,400-unit housing development on the Dawson Farm property in the west part of Rockville.

U.S. Traders Find It's Hard To Do Business With Reds

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—U.S. traders have discovered it's hard to do business with the Communists.

They're hardly bothering to try any more, according to government figures. Total trade in both directions last August was under $2,700,000.

Restrictions on both sides of the Iron Curtain are now almost as tight as security rules. U.S. imports are way down, and exports almost non-existent.

The main items still bought from the Reds are usually considered part of the super-capitalist way of life: Russian luxury furs like sable and fancy tinned hams from Poland. Caviar imports still average about $20,000 a month.

Unit costs on such items are high, but the total commercial importance is small.

From the Communist Far East U.S. businessmen buy only a few out-of-the-way specialities like hog bristles, and cassia oil for perfumes. The chief U.S. trading partner in the vast area of Red Asia is the little satellite of Outer Mongolia, first of the "peoples's republics." What the United States buys there was summed up by a recent census report in this poetic line: "Marmot furs, undressed, and the hair of the cashmere goat."

U.S. shipments to the Communist countries have dwindled from a peak of about 60 million dollars a month in 1947. Now there are only a few gift packages, an occasional publication and once in a while a consignment of tobacco. In August the total reached only $41,000, including shipments to American diplomats and newsmen living behind the Iron Curtain.

After World War II, trade with Russia was lively if not exactly booming. U.S. steel firms were getting 35 per cent of their manganese from the Russians. Receipts of chrome, hops and even sausage casings attained a considerable volume. Trade with China, then still in Nationalist hands, was even larger.

Then came the cold war, the Communist advance in the Far East, and Korea. The United States canceled its trade pacts with the Soviet bloc; the Treasury ruled that Soviet crabmeat is canned by slave labor and can't be imported; Congress prohibited the buying of seven different kinds of furs.

Approximately 85 per cent of the fatal traffic accidents in the United States occur after sundown.

Find Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to stop bleeding—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

U.S. Traders Find It's Hard To Do Business With Reds

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—U.S. traders have discovered it's hard to do business with the Communists.

They're hardly bothering to try any more, according to government figures. Total trade in both directions last August was under $2,700,000.

Restrictions on both sides of the Iron Curtain are now almost as tight as security rules. U.S. imports are way down, and exports almost non-existent.

The main items still bought from the Reds are usually considered part of the super-capitalist way of life: Russian luxury furs like sable and fancy tinned hams from Poland. Caviar imports still average about $20,000 a month.

Unit costs on such items are high, but the total commercial importance is small.

From the Communist Far East U.S. businessmen buy only a few out-of-the-way specialities like hog bristles, and cassia oil for perfumes. The chief U.S. trading partner in the vast area of Red Asia is the little satellite of Outer Mongolia, first of the "peoples's republics." What the United States buys there was summed up by a recent census report in this poetic line: "Marmot furs, undressed, and the hair of the cashmere goat."

U.S. shipments to the Communist countries have dwindled from a peak of about 60 million dollars a month in 1947. Now there are only a few gift packages, an occasional publication and once in a while a consignment of tobacco. In August the total reached only $41,000, including shipments to American diplomats and newsmen living behind the Iron Curtain.

After World War II, trade with Russia was lively if not exactly booming. U.S. steel firms were getting 35 per cent of their manganese from the Russians. Receipts of chrome, hops and even sausage casings attained a considerable volume. Trade with China, then still in Nationalist hands, was even larger.

Then came the cold war, the Communist advance in the Far East, and Korea. The United States canceled its trade pacts with the Soviet bloc; the Treasury ruled that Soviet crabmeat is canned by slave labor and can't be imported; Congress prohibited the buying of seven different kinds of furs.

Approximately 85 per cent of the fatal traffic accidents in the United States occur after sundown.

Announce New Way To Shrink Painful Piles
Find Healing Substance That Does Both—Relieves Pain—Shrinks Hemorrhoids

New York, N. Y. (Special)—For the first time science has found a new healing substance with the astonishing ability to shrink hemorrhoids and to stop bleeding—without surgery.

In one hemorrhoid case after another, "very striking improvement" was reported and verified by doctors' observations.

Pain was relieved promptly. And, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most amazing of all—this improvement was maintained in cases where doctors' observations were continued over a period of many months!

In fact, results were so thorough that sufferers were able to make such astonishing statements as "Piles have ceased to be a problem!" And among these sufferers were a very wide variety of hemorrhoid conditions, some of 10 to 20 years' standing.

All this, without the use of narcotics, anesthetics or astringents of any kind. The secret is a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne®)—the discovery of a world-famous research institution. Already, Bio-Dyne is in wide use for healing injured tissue on all parts of the body.

Now this new healing substance is offered in ointment form for hemorrhoids under the name Preparation H.® The price is only 98¢ a tube including an applicator. The name to ask for is Preparation H—at all drug stores. And remember—if not entirely satisfied—your money will be refunded promptly. Adv. ®Trade Mark

Jewels From The Sea

Pearls on a costume jewelry counter may be artificial, but like real ones, their gem qualities come from the sea.

True pearls are manufactured by oysters or mussels. Artificial pearls, says the all-knowing National Geographic Society, are glass or plastic beads coated with essence d'Orient—pearl essence—made from the silvery scales of small fish.

Before World War II, the scales used came from the bleak, a slender little carp found in the rivers of Europe. Since the war, the industry has found a way to use herring scales as well.

Young herring from the Bay of Fundy have been diverted from the breakfast table to artificial pearl factories in nearby Maine and Canada. Similarly, part of the Norwegian herring catch goes to a Norwegian factory which can produce 12,000 necklaces, earrings and bracelets a week.

Artificial pearls can be good copies in color and shape, but they invariably lack true pearl luster. Real luster comes from light reflected and refracted by many layers of irridescent nacre, products of years of oyster labor.

When they are manufacturing pearls, oysters are intent upon comfort, not necklaces. Finding a foreign object within their shells, they cover it with smooth nacre to prevent irritation.

The first fine imitation pearl produced in Western Europe was made in the 17th Century by Jacquin, a rosary maker of Paris. Coating the inner surface of a thin, opalescent glass sphere first with parchment sizing, then with pearl essence, he filled the hollow middle with white wax.

His product and the imitation-pearl business it inspired did not disturb the natural pearl industry, but the world gem market almost went into a panic in the 1920s when Japan began to export cultured pearls in quantity. Fortunately experts found ways, including X-ray, to tell the difference between the wholly natural and the cultured products.

The Japanese learned pearl culture from the Chinese, who had used the process as early as the 13th Century. Dating from this period are small Chinese-made pearl images of Buddha. The first perfectly spherical cultured pearl was produced by the Japanese in 1909.

Basically, it is a simple matter to stimulate the formation of a cultured pearl. The culturist merely puts a small object into the shell of an oyster or mussel and lets the bi-valve do the rest.

But in actual practice, the pearl is apt to be of poor quality unless the tiny "factory" is carefully fed, nursed through sicknesses and guarded in underwater cages. So onerous and expensive is the process that the Japanese have no competitors outside their country today.

Piltdown Letdown

A Mr. Charles Dawson may go down in archeological history as the man who made asses out of scientists with the jawbone of an ape. He surely will, at any rate, if he can be proved responsible for the "Piltdown Man" hoax.

The hoax has just been exposed. For more than 40 years all but a few very obstinate authorities have accepted Dawson's fake as a genuine "missing link" between ape and man. It was solemnly christened Eoanthropus Dawsonii — Dawson's dawn-man — and many a heated battle was waged in scientific journals over the habits, era and I. Q. of the fictional creature.

The consensus was that Eoanthropus had an ape-like jaw and a purely human brain, and lived perhaps 500,000 years ago.

The story begins in 1908 when Mr. Dawson, lawyer and amateur archeologist, stumbled on some stony material being used to repair roads near Piltdown in Sussex, England. According to his story four years later, after his great "discovery," he asked workmen to keep any fossil bones they found. Part of a jawbone and part of a skull, retrieved by Dawson and taken to the British Museum, were enough to construct the rest of the "dawn-man."

A bust of Eoanthropus is — or was last week — on exhibition in the Natural History Museum in Philadelphia and elsewhere.

A few scientists refused to fall for the imposture. All available evidence, they said, indicates that the primate jaw grows smaller as the primate brain grows larger. Eoanthropus just couldn't be fitted into the series anywhere.

Now they have been vindicated in a special bulletin issued by the British Museum. Dr. Kenneth P. Oakley of London recently drilled into the bones and made chemical tests. He found the jawbone and part of the skull to be modern—not fossils at all. They had been doctored with chemicals to fake an appearance of prehistoric age, and the teeth had been cleverly filed to delay their identification as an orangutan's.

Now a new argument starts. Was Dawson responsible for the hoax, or was he taken in himself? Did he go to his death believing he had made a major discovery, or chuckling at the thought of how he had made monkeys out of scientific men?

What, No Saucers?

Great Britain should have had a great deal of experience in laying ghosts, what with all those old castles. Perhaps this accounts for the efficiency with which a dandy flying saucer scare was punctured and disposed of over there several days ago.

On November 3 a menacing object which reliable witnesses described as "huge, glowing and metallic" was seen over the coastline. An RAF pilot in a jet night-fighter was one of the witnesses. However, what the public didn't know was that the machinery was already in motion to do something about it. A military radar team had the object on the scope and did an exacting job of tracking it. The findings were passed along, top secret, to the War Office.

From that point on it was a painstaking job of detective work. Apparently all government bureaus and airlines were asked to provide information on any plane or planes which might have been in the vicinity at the time. Finally the Air Ministry came up with something.

The track of one of its weather balloons jibed almost exactly with the track furnished by the radar team. Official verdict: Probably just a weather balloon.

Such an abrupt deflation seems almost like sacrilege to Americans. The Air Force messed around and collected interviews for almost three years before it issued its negative "Saucer Report." Imaginative amateurs and experts were allowed full rein with no government bureau going around and throwing cold water. People still aren't satisfied that some of the aerial will-o'-the-wisps which have been spotted by numerous reputable citizens, including a smattering of scientists, aren't visitors from outer space, or at least U. S. space ships.

The Sensitive Nurse

A new occupational hazard has been reported among nurses and doctors who handle streptomycin, penicillin, and other wonder drugs. These men and women are becoming sensitive to these products and every time they give an injection a rash develops on the face or around the eyes.

The problem became so acute in England that the ministry of health conducted a survey among 146 hospitals and local health authorities. To their surprise, the survey uncovered a total of 256 cases. Many of the nurses became sensitized with the initial contact; other were able to handle the products for months or even years before the allergy appeared. Several of the victims recalled that dermatitis developed after the wonder drug was inadvertently brought into contact with the skin or eyes. In some instances the syringe had broken or leaked while being handled. Others accidentally spilled the material on the hands or squirted a drop into the eyes. One nurse had received penicillin for boils and reacted the first time she gave an injection to a patient.

The rash that develops is a typical contact dermatitis. The less sensitive victims exhibit redness and swelling of the skin with itching. The more extreme cases develop lesions resembling eczema or poison ivy. The hands, arms, face, or eyes were involved in practically every case.

Under ordinary circumstances contact dermatitis is easily corrected by avoiding the offending agent. For example, those who are allergic to lipstick or face powder improve after trying another brand. But the situation is different for the nurse because the antibiotics are becoming standard remedies. The only way to escape is to enter other fields of nursing such as in education, industry, public health, or schools. Otherwise meticulous care must be used in handling needles and syringes when administering penicillin and streptomycin. Careful technique is required and immediately after giving an injection the hands should be washed. Rubber gloves also are helpful, especially when dispensing or preparing the product for injection.

A mask, plastic eyeshade, or goggles protects the face and enables the nurse to resume her duties. A long sleeved gown helps when the arms are affected. Creams and ointments containing an antihistaminic product also are useful not only in prevention but in treatment. Dermatitis due to streptomycin is twice as common as that caused by penicillin. The nurses working in tuberculosis sanatoriums are bothered the most because large amounts of streptomycin are used in the treatment of this condition. The injections are given by "treatment teams" who do nothing else but administer this remedy.

PROOF AGAINST CANCER

W. C. writes: I had a lump in my breast and a biopsy revealed no malignancy. Can a person be absolutely assured by only one biopsy that there is no danger of cancer?

REPLY

To err is human, but mistakes in diagnosing cancer are seldom made because those who study biopsies are specially trained in this field. There is no need to worry provided the surgeon removed the lump completely and a reliable pathologist studied the material under the microscope.

OATMEAL WATER

E. D. writes: My husband likes to put raw oatmeal into a pitcher of water, let it soak, and then drink it. Is this practice safe?

REPLY

Yes; there is nothing harmful or intoxicating aboutoatmealwater. So let well enough alone.

HOW OLD IS OLD?

Mrs. W. J. E. writes: You refer to people of 75 as oldsters. I'm 75 and object strenuously to being called an oldster.

REPLY

You have a right to beef because only those 10 years older than ourselves are old.

TOUGH SKIN

T. E. writes: What is scleroderma and is there a cure?

REPLY

IIn this disorder the skin becomes tight, shiny, and smooth due to a disturbance in circulation. The face, neck, and hands are usually involved. Now and then the skin is so taut that the individual is unable to move the hands, utrn the head, smile, or wrinkle the brow. There are several treatments but complete recovery rarely occurs.

Ike Was Warned By Dewey To Stop McCarthy Early; McCarthy's Turning On Eisenhower Administration Should Cause No Surprise At White House

WASHINGTON—Those who have watched President Eisenhower during almost a year in office conclude that the No. 1 lesson he still has to learn is that political tactics are exactly the same as military tactics.

If he had realized this, his friends say, he would not have been so surprised and hurt when Senator McCarthy trained his guns on Ike as well as on Truman during his nation-wide broadcast last week. For in politics as in war, you have to pick the moment for an offensive when your potential enemy is weak to take the offensive. Once you let him gather strength, you must expend more ammunition, risk more loss of men to win the same objective.

This is what no less a person than Tom Dewey told Ike about a year ago. For Eisenhower's real decision regarding McCarthy came not after he got into the White House, but while he was campaigning in Indiana.

Dewey hurried to Washington a year ago last October to warn the Republican candidate that he had to take a stand on McCarthy, and he had better do it the coming week in Milwaukee -- right in McCarthy's own baliwick.

Ike's Best Friend

A week or two before, Eisenhower had been euchred into making a speech in Indianapolis where he shook hands and posed for the news-reels with Senator Jenner of Indiana, the same right-wing Republican who had called Ike's chief benefactor in the Army, George Marshall, "a front for traitors" and "a living lie."

Everyone knew that in his heart Eisenhower didn't relish speaking on the same platform with the rabble-rousing senator from Indiana. Republicans like Senators Duff of Pennsylvania and Ives of New York also knew that Jenner would cut Ike's throat politically once re-elected.

However, the new and green Republican candidate even allowed the man who denounced his best friend to hold up his hand, like the winner at a prize fight, while the newsreels clicked away — all for the benefit of Bill Jenner.

It was after this that Dewey hurried to Washington, persuaded Ike that he had to take a stand regarding the rabble-rousing wing of the GOP, and the best time to do it was in Milwaukee. If Ike either denounced McCarthyism in his own state or did not permit McCarthy to appear on the same platform, Dewey argued, the rest of the party would take the cue that the new Republican leader would not tolerate McCarthyism.

Eisenhower agreed.

Pressure From Summerfield

But when Ike's advisers learned of this, Chairman Arthur Summerfield, now postmaster general, hit the ceiling. Calling Senators Ferguson of Michigan and Hickenlooper of Iowa with Tom Coleman of Wisconsin, they hired a special plane, caught up with the candidate's train in Ohio, argued, pleaded and cajoled until they convinced him he shouldn't snub McCarthy in Milwaukee.

But to salve his conscience, Eisenhower wrote into the Milwaukee speech two paragraphs praising his old friend General Marshall, the man against whom McCarthy had delivered 60,000 words of invective from the safety of the Senate floor.

However, Arthur Summerfield, hearing of the paragraph of praise for Marshall, notified McCarthy and later smuggled McCarthy up the service elevator of the Pere Marquette Hotel in Peoria, Ill., for a secret conference with Eisenhower.

There McCarthy begged that Ike delete the paragraphs praising Marshall. To have Eisenhower slap him in the face with this tribute to a man he had denounced, McCarthy argued, would deal him a body blow right in his own state. In the end, the new candidate yielded.

The paragraphs praising the man who promoted Dwight Eisenhower from the rank of lieutenant colonel to lieutenant general in one year, after Douglas MacArthur had sent him home from the Philippines, were omitted.

After that, the so-called "Neanderthal" wing of the Republican party knew they could handle the candidate. After that, men like liberal Republican Senator Duff of Pennsylvania, the Republican who first urged Ike to run, began to take a much farther back seat.

Stassen Gets Slapped

Some Dewey Republicans, however, figured that after election Eisenhower would see the issues clearly and take a firmer stand. That was why Harold Stassen, a member of the Eisenhower cabinet, took a vigorous stand against McCarthy when the latter announced a deal with Greek shippers. It was the job of the federal government, Stassen announced bluntly and correctly, to deal with Communist trade by Greek shippers.

At this point, however, McCarthy's old friend Vice President Nixon stepped forward. He persuaded Eisenhower that he had to get along with McCarthy, that McCarthy was a power in the party — and by this time he was. For the rules of military tactics had not been applied to politics and McCarthy's strength was growing. So Stassen was told to eat his own words. He did so, humbly, after a conference with McCarthy.

Later when the President delivered his inspiring Dartmouth speech against book-burning, he himself was put in a position of eating his own words. For the Voice of America, about to broadcast the Dartmouth speech abroad, was suddenly stopped.

McCarthy intervened at the White House, following which orders were sent by the White House to the State Department that the inspiring Dartmouth speech in defense of free thought and free literature was not to be broadcast. Furthermore, the President issued a statement that the Dartmouth speech meant no reflection on the senator from Wisconsin.

By this time every Republican leader took the cue. Ike was behind McCarthy. By this time, also, McCarthy's strength was gaining more momentum.

It was no great surprise, therefore, when Attorney General Brownell announced publicly that he was dropping the long and carefully documented Senate Elections Committee charges against McCarthy.

But it did cause great surprise—certainly at the White House — when the man who had been strengthened and built up by Ike turned on him, over every major network, and proceeded to scold his administration almost as if he were Harry Truman.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Piltdown Man

The archeologists, anthropologists and other specialists have long labored to discover the origin of man, avoiding, of course, the hypothesis that he was created by God in His image. These scientific folk have dug in the debris of the past for skulls and bones and stones and potteries, hoping eventually to come upon the first ancestor of us all.

They have found some bones in Heidelberg in Germany, in Java, in the south of France, in the vicinity of Peking in China, and in Piltdown in Sussex, England. And out of these bones, they reconstructed frightening caricatures of manhood to which they gave various names, such as Pithecanthropus Erectus and Cro-Magnards, etc., all of which at school we had to memorize and believe, just as the theological students in the Middle Ages were required to know the details of the lives of angels.

No skeptic dared to raise even an eyebrow because science is infallible and each scientist stands above the normal errors of man until another scientist proves that the contrary of any hypothesis can be as correct as the original. Thus, we poor mortals, knowing only the facts of life, can never tell whether Einstein's correction of Newton is perfection itself until someone in this intellectual elite corrects Einstein, which may or may not happen while we are alive, for such genius does not often beset the human race.

At any rate, the Piltdown Man, of whose existence I was required to believe nearly 40 years ago, is no more. He has been undone by chemistry, which wore away his patina and proved him to be a fraud perpetrated by a humorist, who while unknown has achieved immortality.

Of Piltdown, that popularizer of science and history, H. G. Wells, wrote:

". . . The bony remains discovered at Piltdown in Sussex display a creature still ascending only very gradually from the sub-human.

"The first scraps of this skull were found in an excavation for road gravel in Sussex. Bit by bit other fragments of this skull were hunted out from the quarry heaps until most of it could be pieced together. It is a thick skull, thicker than that of any living race of men, and it has a brain capacity intermediate between that of Pithecanthropus and man. This creature has been named Eoanthropus, the dawn man. . .

"There was moreover a jawbone among these scattered remains, which was at first assumed naturally enough to belong to Eoanthropus, but which it was afterwards suggested was probably that of a chimpanzee. It is extraordinarily like that of a chimpanzee, but Dr. Keith, one of the greatest authorities in these questions, assigns it, after an exhaustive analysis in his "Antiquity of Man" (1915), to the skull with which it is found. It is, as a jaw-bone, far less human in character than the jaw of the much more ancient Homo Heidelbergensis, but the teeth are in some respects more like those of living men."

Well, it apparently was not so. It is now assumed that some fellow, with artistry and skill, pasted a lot of odds and ends together, and did a job on the scientist.

Now, we who know nothing—not having Ph.D.'s—ought not to badger the scientific elite, because one error does not prove that they are all wrong. We should recognize their sincerity in believing what they see even if the thing was put there for them to see.

My complaint is that they ridicule those who believe what we do not see or hear or smell or touch because some concepts are not measurable by instruments or by knowledge but only by faith. The scientists reject our faith but insist upon their own as infallible. They really do not know for a fact that the Piltdown gravel pit is 100,000 years old, although they are willing to believe that, just as they believed, up to this week, that the Piltdown Man was somewhere between 50,000 and 100,000 years old. He turns out to have been manufactured like a toy in one of Woolworth's stores but with greater competence.

Now that the Piltdown sub-man is no longer an ancestor, I think I shall return to the theologians, who, if they cannot prove their case by a microscope, give me the comfort of a power outside myself, whose moral law is, at any rate, a guide to decent living.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — The American people, from coast to coast, were given on Thursday last by the Associated Press a dispatch quoting extensively from an article by a New York Times correspondent here, accusing Senator McCarthy of having "distorted" the facts in the case of John Paton Davies. The senator during his television-radio speech two days before had said that Davies, while in the State Department under the last administration, recommended the use of some known Communist agents to be a part of the Central Intelligence Agency operations, and was nevertheless still a government official under the Eisenhower administration.

The New York Times writer, who said he was reflecting the views of unnamed "top White House staff members," attributed to those White House staff members the following point about the Davies case:

"He (McCarthy) distorted the John Paton Davies case, although he knew the facts in that case as well as did Undersecretary of State W. Bedell Smith, who gave them to him under oath."

Testimony Not Declassified

Now it so happens that Mr. Smith never testified at any time on the Davies case before any committee of which the Wisconsin senator was a member, or at any time when he was present. Both Undersecretary of State and Senator McCarthy have confirmed this categorical statement of fact.

The N. Y. Times dispatch says that Senators McCarthy and McCarran had charged that Davies "recommended putting Communists in key spots in the Central Intelligence Agency, and Undersecretary of State Smith finally went before them and declassified some top secret information to set this charge straight."

The facts are that the only testimony on the Davies case given by Mr. Smith before the Senate Committee on Internal Security has never been "declassified" or released for publication, and Senator McCarthy was not a member of that committee. The N. Y. Times dispatch continues:

"He (Mr. Smith) told (the committee) that a decision had been taken to use some Communists as counter-espionage agents and that Mr. Davies had been asked to recommend several men who might handle the job."

This statement is wholly untrue. Mr. Smith was not the head of Central Intelligence when the episode happened, and Admiral Hillenkoetter, who was the head of it, testified before the Senate Internal Security Committee that he had completely rejected the proposed plan after consulting with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. There was never any "decision" to use the Communist agents, and Davies himself admitted in testimony before the Senate Committee that the plan was entirely his own, and not that of any of his superiors in the State Department or of anyone in the Central Intelligence Agency.

The N. Y. Times dispatch continues:

"While this information (concerning the use of some Communists as counter-espionage agents) still was classified as top secret, and Mr. Davies was not permitted to let it be known that the Central Intelligence Agency was using some Communists as counter-espionage agents, Mr. Davies was asked about this and said he knew nothing about it. Later Undersecretary Smith allowed Mr. Davies to discuss the espionage plan and he did so in McCarthy's presence."

Says Statements Inaccurate

None of the foregoing statements is accurate. Davies testified on August 8 and August 10, 1951, before Senator McCarran and two members of his staff. Senator McCarthy was not a member of the committee and was not present. Davies talked at length to the committee about the plan he had proposed to the Central Intelligence Agency at a conference he had with two CIA officials—Lyle Munson and Edward Hunter—on November 16, 1949. Both Munson and Hunter under oath contradicted Davies, and said they did not get any impression that the Communists were to be used as counter-espionage agents, but that the Communists were to prepare "materials" for the policy guidance of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Seven discrepancies between the testimony of the two CIA officials and Davies caused Senator McCarran on February 21, 1952, to request the Department of Justice to present the evidence to a grand jury for a perjury indictment against Davies. The Davies testimony of 1951, and some of the sworn statements of the CIA officials made at that time, were made public early this year by the Senate Internal Security Committee. The testimony of Admiral Hillenkoetter, corroborating in general the statements of Munson and Hunter, has never been made public.

NEW YORK (INS) — One score of years ago, come Saturday, the bathtub disappeared as a standard fixture in the manufacture of gin. Prune juice and straight alcohol no longer totaled up to rye. Corn squeezins deserted the faithful old ball mason jar for something shapely and with a pretty label.

Scotch stopped being the principal export of several off-coast places where it was hardly indigenous, notably St. Pierre et Miquelon and the Islands of the Caribbean. And at the same time its running ceased to be a source of friction between the state department and his majesty's government. Champagne became a rare vine made of grapes, and, hardly by coincidence at all, cider retired to the jug. With the stroke of a pen at Salt Lake City, Utah had become the 36th state to ratify the 21st amendment. And 13 years, 10 months and 18 days of prohibition — and all of prohibition's spawn — were done.

In Washington, D. C., the drought had lasted a bit longer than in the rest of the country. We got prohibition first. While Baltimore wallowed in the strong stuff, or so we unjustly thought of that fine old abstemious port, Washington lay parched in the sun.

Its lively bootlegging industry had not begun to function properly. Such stuff as reached the capital had to be run in from Baltimore by car or train. The runners seldom could run, by the time they got back. I can still see some of them, stumbling off the lumbering old Washington-Baltimore-Annapolis electric cars, at the corner of Second and H street, N. E., barely able to lift the cheap, gurgling suitcases. One guy used to have a saw protruding from his suitcase, in a clumsy effort to imitate a carpenter. His great consolation whenever he was caught was that the only way the cop could seize the bulk of the cargo was with a stomach pump.

A lot of drugstore prescription clerks went out of business on December 5, 1933. Many of them must have bought banks. The more intelligent bootleggers went legit, many choosing fields where the customers would be essentially the same as during prohibition — restaurant, night club and wholesale liquor businesses. A few tried to keep going outside the law and wound up in the can, or very dead.

Prohibition was a dream-period for a hood. The "noble experiment" caused a greater loss of respect for the law of the land than did any previous or subsequent act of Congress. The period spawned the flapper, the flask, corruption in high places and scum like Dutch Schultz. It made drunkardness "smart," and in doing all this it produced a few speakeasies which many of us who have survived the 20 years of "wet" remember with affection.

Most of all, prohibition made money for the wrong people. Some figures from Licensed Beverage Industries, Inc., say that per capita consumption during prohibition averaged two gallons a year, or just under one and a half ounces every day. One could only guess where the stuff was made, of course. And hope. Estimates of the worth of the illicit industry run as high as $1,000,000,000.

Repeal put 1,200,000 people to work in the depth of the depression, with a payroll of $3,000,000,000, plus another billion spent among 400 different suppliers. It wiped out the multi-multi-million dollar costs of enforcing the 18th amendment, and gave the government a new source for taxation which it has been slowly devouring ever since.

People drink a little less now, with every state "wet" except Mississippi and Oklahoma (har!), than they did when all 48 were "dry." An exception since 1940 has been Washington, the one-time drought area. During World War II it became the heaviest drinking town in the land. This in face of the fact that some of this was Cuban gin, a liquid tonsilectomy which not even the most desperate Washington bootlegger would have peddled.

Teetotaling historians are wont to shudder over some of the "mule" the generation of the 1920's consumed, without going blind. But a new generation of drinkers can shudder too, over how we greeted the first rosy dawn of repeal. The big drink in our set, before and after dinner, one recalls wanly, was Manhattan. Scotch was something you managed to get down by mixing it with Vermouth and dousing with Angostura bitters. A thick Alexander was regarded as brillat-savarin may have looked at a pousse cafe. The wonder is that we survived long enough to learn about whisky and water.

Jewels From The Sea

Pearls on a costume jewelry counter may be artificial, but like real ones, their gem qualities come from the sea.

True pearls are manufactured by oysters or mussels. Artificial pearls, says the all-knowing National Geographic Society, are glass or plastic beads coated with essence d'Orient—pearl essence—made from the silvery scales of small fish.

Before World War II, the scales used came from the bleak, a slender little carp found in the rivers of Europe. Since the war, the industry has found a way to use herring scales as well.

Young herring from the Bay of Fundy have been diverted from the breakfast table to artificial pearl factories in nearby Maine and Canada. Similarly, part of the Norwegian herring catch goes to a Norwegian factory which can produce 12,000 necklaces, earrings and bracelets a week.

Artificial pearls can be good copies in color and shape, but they invariably lack true pearl luster. Real luster comes from light reflected and refracted by many layers of irridescent nacre, products of years of oyster labor.

When they are manufacturing pearls, oysters are intent upon comfort, not necklaces. Finding a foreign object within their shells, they cover it with smooth nacre to prevent irritation.

The first fine imitation pearl produced in Western Europe was made in the 17th Century by Jacquin, a rosary maker of Paris. Coating the inner surface of a thin, opalescent glass sphere first with parchment sizing, then with pearl essence, he filled the hollow middle with white wax.

His product and the imitation-pearl business it inspired did not disturb the natural pearl industry, but the world gem market almost went into a panic in the 1920s when Japan began to export cultured pearls in quantity. Fortunately experts found ways, including X-ray, to tell the difference between the wholly natural and the cultured products.

The Japanese learned pearl culture from the Chinese, who had used the process as early as the 13th Century. Dating from this period are small Chinese-made pearl images of Buddha. The first perfectly spherical cultured pearl was produced by the Japanese in 1909.

Basically, it is a simple matter to stimulate the formation of a cultured pearl. The culturist merely puts a small object into the shell of an oyster or mussel and lets the bi-valve do the rest.

But in actual practice, the pearl is apt to be of poor quality unless the tiny "factory" is carefully fed, nursed through sicknesses and guarded in underwater cages. So onerous and expensive is the process that the Japanese have no competitors outside their country today.

Piltdown Letdown

A Mr. Charles Dawson may go down in archeological history as the man who made asses out of scientists with the jawbone of an ape. He surely will, at any rate, if he can be proved responsible for the "Piltdown Man" hoax.

The hoax has just been exposed. For more than 40 years all but a few very obstinate authorities have accepted Dawson's fake as a genuine "missing link" between ape and man. It was solemnly christened Eoanthropus Dawsonii — Dawson's dawn-man — and many a heated battle was waged in scientific journals over the habits, era and I. Q. of the fictional creature.

The consensus was that Eoanthropus had an ape-like jaw and a purely human brain, and lived perhaps 500,000 years ago.

The story begins in 1908 when Mr. Dawson, lawyer and amateur archeologist, stumbled on some stony material being used to repair roads near Piltdown in Sussex, England. According to his story four years later, after his great "discovery," he asked workmen to keep any fossil bones they found. Part of a jawbone and part of a skull, retrieved by Dawson and taken to the British Museum, were enough to construct the rest of the "dawn-man."

A bust of Eoanthropus is — or was last week — on exhibition in the Natural History Museum in Philadelphia and elsewhere.

A few scientists refused to fall for the imposture. All available evidence, they said, indicates that the primate jaw grows smaller as the primate brain grows larger. Eoanthropus just couldn't be fitted into the series anywhere.

Now they have been vindicated in a special bulletin issued by the British Museum. Dr. Kenneth P. Oakley of London recently drilled into the bones and made chemical tests. He found the jawbone and part of the skull to be modern—not fossils at all. They had been doctored with chemicals to fake an appearance of prehistoric age, and the teeth had been cleverly filed to delay their identification as an orangutan's.

Now a new argument starts. Was Dawson responsible for the hoax, or was he taken in himself? Did he go to his death believing he had made a major discovery, or chuckling at the thought of how he had made monkeys out of scientific men?

What, No Saucers?

Great Britain should have had a great deal of experience in laying ghosts, what with all those old castles. Perhaps this accounts for the efficiency with which a dandy flying saucer scare was punctured and disposed of over there several days ago.

On November 3 a menacing object which reliable witnesses described as "huge, glowing and metallic" was seen over the coastline. An RAF pilot in a jet night-fighter was one of the witnesses. However, what the public didn't know was that the machinery was already in motion to do something about it. A military radar team had the object on the scope and did an exacting job of tracking it. The findings were passed along, top secret, to the War Office.

From that point on it was a painstaking job of detective work. Apparently all government bureaus and airlines were asked to provide information on any plane or planes which might have been in the vicinity at the time. Finally the Air Ministry came up with something.

The track of one of its weather balloons jibed almost exactly with the track furnished by the radar team. Official verdict: Probably just a weather balloon.

Such an abrupt deflation seems almost like sacrilege to Americans. The Air Force messed around and collected interviews for almost three years before it issued its negative "Saucer Report." Imaginative amateurs and experts were allowed full rein with no government bureau going around and throwing cold water. People still aren't satisfied that some of the aerial will-o'-the-wisps which have been spotted by numerous reputable citizens, including a smattering of scientists, aren't visitors from outer space, or at least U. S. space ships.

The Sensitive Nurse

A new occupational hazard has been reported among nurses and doctors who handle streptomycin, penicillin, and other wonder drugs. These men and women are becoming sensitive to these products and every time they give an injection a rash develops on the face or around the eyes.

The problem became so acute in England that the ministry of health conducted a survey among 146 hospitals and local health authorities. To their surprise, the survey uncovered a total of 256 cases. Many of the nurses became sensitized with the initial contact; other were able to handle the products for months or even years before the allergy appeared. Several of the victims recalled that dermatitis developed after the wonder drug was inadvertently brought into contact with the skin or eyes. In some instances the syringe had broken or leaked while being handled. Others accidentally spilled the material on the hands or squirted a drop into the eyes. One nurse had received penicillin for boils and reacted the first time she gave an injection to a patient.

The rash that develops is a typical contact dermatitis. The less sensitive victims exhibit redness and swelling of the skin with itching. The more extreme cases develop lesions resembling eczema or poison ivy. The hands, arms, face, or eyes were involved in practically every case.

Under ordinary circumstances contact dermatitis is easily corrected by avoiding the offending agent. For example, those who are allergic to lipstick or face powder improve after trying another brand. But the situation is different for the nurse because the antibiotics are becoming standard remedies. The only way to escape is to enter other fields of nursing such as in education, industry, public health, or schools. Otherwise meticulous care must be used in handling needles and syringes when administering penicillin and streptomycin. Careful technique is required and immediately after giving an injection the hands should be washed. Rubber gloves also are helpful, especially when dispensing or preparing the product for injection.

A mask, plastic eyeshade, or goggles protects the face and enables the nurse to resume her duties. A long sleeved gown helps when the arms are affected. Creams and ointments containing an antihistaminic product also are useful not only in prevention but in treatment. Dermatitis due to streptomycin is twice as common as that caused by penicillin. The nurses working in tuberculosis sanatoriums are bothered the most because large amounts of streptomycin are used in the treatment of this condition. The injections are given by "treatment teams" who do nothing else but administer this remedy.

TOMORROW: Lung cancer from contaminated air.

PROOF AGAINST CANCER

W. C. writes: I had a lump in my breast and a biopsy revealed no malignancy. Can a person be absolutely assured by only one biopsy that there is no danger of cancer?

REPLY

To err is human, but mistakes in diagnosing cancer are seldom made because those who study biopsies are specially trained in this field. There is no need to worry provided the surgeon removed the lump completely and a reliable pathologist studied the material under the microscope.

OATMEAL WATER

E. D. writes: My husband likes to put raw oatmeal into a pitcher of water, let it soak, and then drink it. Is this practice safe?

REPLY

Yes; there is nothing harmful or intoxicating aboutoatmealwater. So let well enough alone.

HOW OLD IS OLD?

Mrs. W. J. E. writes: You refer to people of 75 as oldsters. I'm 75 and object strenuously to being called an oldster.

REPLY

You have a right to beef because only those 10 years older than ourselves are old.

TOUGH SKIN

T. E. writes: What is scleroderma and is there a cure?

REPLY

In this disorder the skin becomes tight, shiny, and smooth due to a disturbance in circulation. The face, neck, and hands are usually involved. Now and then the skin is so taut that the individual is unable to move the hands, utrn the head, smile, or wrinkle the brow. There are several treatments but complete recovery rarely occurs.

HOPE FOR FUTURE

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Ike Was Warned By Dewey To Stop McCarthy Early; McCarthy's Turning On Eisenhower Administration Should Cause No Surprise At White House

WASHINGTON—Those who have watched President Eisenhower during almost a year in office conclude that the No. 1 lesson he still has to learn is that political tactics are exactly the same as military tactics.

If he had realized this, his friends say, he would not have been so surprised and hurt when Senator McCarthy trained his guns on Ike as well as on Truman during his nation-wide broadcast last week. For in politics as in war, you have to pick the moment for an offensive when your potential enemy is weak to take the offensive. Once you let him gather strength, you must expend more ammunition, risk more loss of men to win the same objective.

This is what no less a person than Tom Dewey told Ike about a year ago. For Eisenhower's real decision regarding McCarthy came not after he got into the White House, but while he was campaigning in Indiana.

Dewey hurried to Washington a year ago last October to warn the Republican candidate that he had to take a stand on McCarthy, and he had better do it the coming week in Milwaukee -- right in McCarthy's own baliwick.

Ike's Best Friend

A week or two before, Eisenhower had been euchred into making a speech in Indianapolis where he shook hands and posed for the news-reels with Senator Jenner of Indiana, the same right-wing Republican who had called Ike's chief benefactor in the Army, George Marshall, "a front for traitors" and "a living lie."

Everyone knew that in his heart Eisenhower didn't relish speaking on the same platform with the rabble-rousing senator from Indiana. Republicans like Senators Duff of Pennsylvania and Ives of New York also knew that Jenner would cut Ike's throat politically once re-elected.

However, the new and green Republican candidate even allowed the man who denounced his best friend to hold up his hand, like the winner at a prize fight, while the newsreels clicked away — all for the benefit of Bill Jenner.

It was after this that Dewey hurried to Washington, persuaded Ike that he had to take a stand regarding the rabble-rousing wing of the GOP, and the best time to do it was in Milwaukee. If Ike either denounced McCarthyism in his own state or did not permit McCarthy to appear on the same platform, Dewey argued, the rest of the party would take the cue that the new Republican leader would not tolerate McCarthyism.

Eisenhower agreed.

Pressure From Summerfield

But when Ike's advisers learned of this, Chairman Arthur Summerfield, now postmaster general, hit the ceiling. Calling Senators Ferguson of Michigan and Hickenlooper of Iowa with Tom Coleman of Wisconsin, they hired a special plane, caught up with the candidate's train in Ohio, argued, pleaded and cajoled until they convinced him he shouldn't snub McCarthy in Milwaukee.

But to salve his conscience, Eisenhower wrote into the Milwaukee speech two paragraphs praising his old friend General Marshall, the man against whom McCarthy had delivered 60,000 words of invective from the safety of the Senate floor.

However, Arthur Summerfield, hearing of the paragraph of praise for Marshall, notified McCarthy and later smuggled McCarthy up the service elevator of the Pere Marquette Hotel in Peoria, Ill., for a secret conference with Eisenhower.

There McCarthy begged that Ike delete the paragraphs praising Marshall. To have Eisenhower slap him in the face with this tribute to a man he had denounced, McCarthy argued, would deal him a body blow right in his own state. In the end, the new candidate yielded.

The paragraphs praising the man who promoted Dwight Eisenhower from the rank of lieutenant colonel to lieutenant general in one year, after Douglas MacArthur had sent him home from the Philippines, were omitted.

After that, the so-called "Neanderthal" wing of the Republican party knew they could handle the candidate. After that, men like liberal Republican Senator Duff of Pennsylvania, the Republican who first urged Ike to run, began to take a much farther back seat.

Stassen Gets Slapped

Some Dewey Republicans, however, figured that after election Eisenhower would see the issues clearly and take a firmer stand. That was why Harold Stassen, a member of the Eisenhower cabinet, took a vigorous stand against McCarthy when the latter announced a deal with Greek shippers. It was the job of the federal government, Stassen announced bluntly and correctly, to deal with Communist trade by Greek shippers.

At this point, however, McCarthy's old friend Vice President Nixon stepped forward. He persuaded Eisenhower that he had to get along with McCarthy, that McCarthy was a power in the party — and by this time he was. For the rules of military tactics had not been applied to politics and McCarthy's strength was growing. So Stassen was told to eat his own words. He did so, humbly, after a conference with McCarthy.

Later when the President delivered his inspiring Dartmouth speech against book-burning, he himself was put in a position of eating his own words. For the Voice of America, about to broadcast the Dartmouth speech abroad, was suddenly stopped.

McCarthy intervened at the White House, following which orders were sent by the White House to the State Department that the inspiring Dartmouth speech in defense of free thought and free literature was not to be broadcast. Furthermore, the President issued a statement that the Dartmouth speech meant no reflection on the senator from Wisconsin.

By this time every Republican leader took the cue. Ike was behind McCarthy. By this time, also, McCarthy's strength was gaining more momentum.

It was no great surprise, therefore, when Attorney General Brownell announced publicly that he was dropping the long and carefully documented Senate Elections Committee charges against McCarthy.

But it did cause great surprise—certainly at the White House — when the man who had been strengthened and built up by Ike turned on him, over every major network, and proceeded to scold his administration almost as if he were Harry Truman.

These Days

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

The Piltdown Man

The archeologists, anthropologists and other specialists have long labored to discover the origin of man, avoiding, of course, the hypothesis that he was created by God in His image. These scientific folk have dug in the debris of the past for skulls and bones and stones and potteries, hoping eventually to come upon the first ancestor of us all.

They have found some bones in Heidelberg in Germany, in Java, in the south of France, in the vicinity of Peking in China, and in Piltdown in Sussex, England. And out of these bones, they reconstructed frightening caricatures of manhood to which they gave various names, such as Pithecanthropus Erectus and Cro-Magnards, etc., all of which at school we had to memorize and believe, just as the theological students in the Middle Ages were required to know the details of the lives of angels.

No skeptic dared to raise even an eyebrow because science is infallible and each scientist stands above the normal errors of man until another scientist proves that the contrary of any hypothesis can be as correct as the original. Thus, we poor mortals, knowing only the facts of life, can never tell whether Einstein's correction of Newton is perfection itself until someone in this intellectual elite corrects Einstein, which may or may not happen while we are alive, for such genius does not often beset the human race.

At any rate, the Piltdown Man, of whose existence I was required to believe nearly 40 years ago, is no more. He has been undone by chemistry, which wore away his patina and proved him to be a fraud perpetrated by a humorist, who while unknown has achieved immortality.

Of Piltdown, that popularizer of science and history, H. G. Wells, wrote:

". . . The bony remains discovered at Piltdown in Sussex display a creature still ascending only very gradually from the sub-human.

"The first scraps of this skull were found in an excavation for road gravel in Sussex. Bit by bit other fragments of this skull were hunted out from the quarry heaps until most of it could be pieced together. It is a thick skull, thicker than that of any living race of men, and it has a brain capacity intermediate between that of Pithecanthropus and man. This creature has been named Eoanthropus, the dawn man. . .

"There was moreover a jawbone among these scattered remains, which was at first assumed naturally enough to belong to Eoanthropus, but which it was afterwards suggested was probably that of a chimpanzee. It is extraordinarily like that of a chimpanzee, but Dr. Keith, one of the greatest authorities in these questions, assigns it, after an exhaustive analysis in his "Antiquity of Man" (1915), to the skull with which it is found. It is, as a jaw-bone, far less human in character than the jaw of the much more ancient Homo Heidelbergensis, but the teeth are in some respects more like those of living men."

Well, it apparently was not so. It is now assumed that some fellow, with artistry and skill, pasted a lot of odds and ends together, and did a job on the scientist.

Now, we who know nothing—not having Ph.D.'s—ought not to badger the scientific elite, because one error does not prove that they are all wrong. We should recognize their sincerity in believing what they see even if the thing was put there for them to see.

My complaint is that they ridicule those who believe what we do not see or hear or smell or touch because some concepts are not measurable by instruments or by knowledge but only by faith. The scientists reject our faith but insist upon their own as infallible. They really do not know for a fact that the Piltdown gravel pit is 100,000 years old, although they are willing to believe that, just as they believed, up to this week, that the Piltdown Man was somewhere between 50,000 and 100,000 years old. He turns out to have been manufactured like a toy in one of Woolworth's stores but with greater competence.

Now that the Piltdown sub-man is no longer an ancestor, I think I shall return to the theologians, who, if they cannot prove their case by a microscope, give me the comfort of a power outside myself, whose moral law is, at any rate, a guide to decent living.

Today In Washington

By DAVID LAWRENCE

WASHINGTON — The American people, from coast to coast, were given on Thursday last by the Associated Press a dispatch quoting extensively from an article by a New York Times correspondent here, accusing Senator McCarthy of having "distorted" the facts in the case of John Paton Davies. The senator during his television-radio speech two days before had said that Davies, while in the State Department under the last administration, recommended the use of some known Communist agents to be a part of the Central Intelligence Agency operations, and was nevertheless still a government official under the Eisenhower administration.

The New York Times writer, who said he was reflecting the views of unnamed "top White House staff members," attributed to those White House staff members the following point about the Davies case:

"He (McCarthy) distorted the John Paton Davies case, although he knew the facts in that case as well as did Undersecretary of State W. Bedell Smith, who gave them to him under oath."

Testimony Not Declassified

Now it so happens that Mr. Smith never testified at any time on the Davies case before any committee of which the Wisconsin senator was a member, or at any time when he was present. Both Undersecretary of State and Senator McCarthy have confirmed this categorical statement of fact.

The N. Y. Times dispatch says that Senators McCarthy and McCarran had charged that Davies "recommended putting Communists in key spots in the Central Intelligence Agency, and Undersecretary of State Smith finally went before them and declassified some top secret information to set this charge straight."

The facts are that the only testimony on the Davies case given by Mr. Smith before the Senate Committee on Internal Security has never been "declassified" or released for publication, and Senator McCarthy was not a member of that committee. The N. Y. Times dispatch continues:

"He (Mr. Smith) told (the committee) that a decision had been taken to use some Communists as counter-espionage agents and that Mr. Davies had been asked to recommend several men who might handle the job."

This statement is wholly untrue. Mr. Smith was not the head of Central Intelligence when the episode happened, and Admiral Hillenkoetter, who was the head of it, testified before the Senate Internal Security Committee that he had completely rejected the proposed plan after consulting with the Federal Bureau of Investigation. There was never any "decision" to use the Communist agents, and Davies himself admitted in testimony before the Senate Committee that the plan was entirely his own, and not that of any of his superiors in the State Department or of anyone in the Central Intelligence Agency.

The N. Y. Times dispatch continues:

"While this information (concerning the use of some Communists as counter-espionage agents) still was classified as top secret, and Mr. Davies was not permitted to let it be known that the Central Intelligence Agency was using some Communists as counter-espionage agents, Mr. Davies was asked about this and said he knew nothing about it. Later Undersecretary Smith allowed Mr. Davies to discuss the espionage plan and he did so in McCarthy's presence."

Says Statements Inaccurate

None of the foregoing statements is accurate. Davies testified on August 8 and August 10, 1951, before Senator McCarran and two members of his staff. Senator McCarthy was not a member of the committee and was not present. Davies talked at length to the committee about the plan he had proposed to the Central Intelligence Agency at a conference he had with two CIA officials—Lyle Munson and Edward Hunter—on November 16, 1949. Both Munson and Hunter under oath contradicted Davies, and said they did not get any impression that the Communists were to be used as counter-espionage agents, but that the Communists were to prepare "materials" for the policy guidance of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Seven discrepancies between the testimony of the two CIA officials and Davies caused Senator McCarran on February 21, 1952, to request the Department of Justice to present the evidence to a grand jury for a perjury indictment against Davies. The Davies testimony of 1951, and some of the sworn statements of the CIA officials made at that time, were made public early this year by the Senate Internal Security Committee. The testimony of Admiral Hillenkoetter, corroborating in general the statements of Munson and Hunter, has never been made public.

This in face of the fact that some of this was Cuban gin, a liquid tonsilectomy which not even the most desperate Washington bootlegger would have peddled.

Teetotaling historians are wont to shudder over some of the "mule" the generation of the 1920's consumed, without going blind. But a new generation of drinkers can shudder too, over how we greeted the first rosy dawn of repeal. The big drink in our set, before and after dinner, one recalls wanly, was Manhattan. Scotch was something you managed to get down by mixing it with Vermouth and dousing with Angostura bitters. A Thick Alexander was regarded as brillat-savarin may have looked at a pousse cafe. The wonder is that we survived long enough to learn about whisky and water.

Request To Operate Religious Sound Truck Is Tabled By City

Water Commissioner William J. Edwards was acting mayor as the Mayor and Council held an abbreviated session yesterday.

Mayor Eves, along with Commissioner John J. Long, City Attorney Thomas B. Finan and Police Chief R. Emmett Flynn, were in Hagerstown in connection with a bookmaking case against three local men in court.

Council withheld action on a request from Paul W. Swick to operate a public address system between 1 and 6 p. m. on any day except Sunday to bring religious records and information to the public. Swick is affiliated with Assembly of God Church.

Edwards said the request was out of line in that it did not specify an exact period. Finance Commissioner William V. Keegan said the matter should be referred to the city attorney and his motion was approved.

Council authorized Charles M. Koontz, solictor for Evitts Creek Water Company, to purchase the Leo Kotchenreuther property at Bedford for the company. The amount involved is $22.42 and will be paid by the company.

A donation of $100 was voted for the Allegany-Garrett Tuberculosis Association Funds will be taken from the Sunday Movie tax fund.

A letter of thanks from the Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra for a $250 contribution was read and filed.

Approved was the application of Sun Heating Company to install storage tanks and oil burners at 704 Piedmont Avenue and 21 Utah Avenue.

City Auditor Arthur B. Gibson was authorized to issue checks to city employes tomorrow for the last two weeks of November.

Meter Inspector Harry Whisner reported collections for the week of November 8-15 decreased $25.75 and increased $37.47 for the week November 15-22.

Water consumption for the week ending Sunday was 105,450,000 gallons compared to 88,000,000 the same period a year ago. The water level at Lake Gordon is two feet, 6 inches below the crest of the spillway and at Lake Koon 27 feet below.

LaSalle Minstrel Continues Tonight

Additional performance of the Men of LaSalle minstrel will be presented tonight at 8 o'clock in Carroll Hall, according to Earl M. Nonnenmann, director. Another showings will be given on Wednesday evening.

Members of the chorus were selected from the students of LaSalle, St. Mary's and Catholic Girls Central High Schools and Ursuline Academy.

Proceeds from the minstrel will be used for improvements at LaSalle High School. There are comedy skits, dances, songs and novelty numbers on the program.

The word "pajama" comes from Hindu words meaning "leg" and "garment."

Hotel Group Opposes Both Crosstown And By-Pass Plan

The Cumberland Hotel Association has gone on record opposing both the crosstown bridge (expressway)) and alternate by-pass routes.

In a letter to the Mayor and Council yesterday, the association submitted a resolution of opposition and said it felt further engineering study coupled with real knowledge of local conditions, can lead to a solution of the traffic problem far more satisfactorily than the expressway or by-pass.

The money, the association continued, could be more wisely spent on improving Route 40 east with particular reference to the hazardous curves on Polish mountain. It would also encourage the tourist flow to Cumberland which is leaving Route 40 at Hancock and going to the Pennsylvania Turnpike, the resolution added.

The letter from the association was signed by Patrick Stakem, president.

Would Blight Area

The resolution said the expressway would have detrimental affects on business and would blight the area involved. It said there is no economic justification for either plan.

Of the alternate plan, the association said it is not a traffic solution since only limited service is offered. The alternate plan has been proposed by the Municipal Planning and Zoning Commission.

Finance Commissioner William V. Keegan said that the opening statement of the resolution is in error. The resolution said the expressway had been "proposed" by the city and approved by the State Roads Commission. That is wrong, Keegan said.

Cost Information Sought

Later, Mrs. Lucile W. Roeder, commissioner of streets and public property, asked if the SRC had advised the city the exact cost to Cumberland under the expressway or any other plan, and suggested a meeting be held as soon as possible.

City Engineer Charles R. Nuzum said a letter has been sent asking the commission for a study and report on the alternate route.

Mrs. Roeder also requested similar information on the Frederick Street improvement project. Nuzum said the state has asked the federal Bureau of Public Roads to study the storm sewer system involved in the project and assumed that the city will be notified of approval or disapproval when the state gets the federal report.

Mrs. Roeder suggested the city could request a report from the BPR and Nuzum said the agency could be asked the status of the study. Council agreed to make the request.

Absent from the session were Mayor Roy W. Eves, Police and Fire Commissioner John J. Long and City Attorney Thomas B. Finan who are in Hagerstown in connection with a trial of three local men on bookmaking charges.

An increase in earnings as compared with the previous fiscal year has been announced by Aaron Marks, president of National Shirt Shops of Delaware, Inc., in the company's annual report to stockholders.

Net income was $851,438 equal to $1.89 a share. For the previous fiscal year net income, including income from 'prior years' adjustments, was $778,374, equal to $1.73 a share.

Marks also announced a new peak in sales. Net sales amounted to $20,690,210 compared with $18,949,316 in the preceding year, an increase of 9.2 per cent.

He also noted that the company continues to maintain its strong financial position having, on August 31, 1953, working capital amounting to $4,312,388, equal to $9.58 a share. As of the same date, net worth was $6,573,057 equal to $14.61 a share.

Reporting on store operations, Marks said three new stores were opened during the last fiscal year. Since the close of the fiscal year two new stores were opened, bringing to 110 the number of stores now comprising the chain.

Former Capon Bridge Man Is Drowned

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP)—Lester Strother, 24, a bank employe formerly of Capon Bridge, W. Va., drowned in the ocean surf Saturday.

Constable Jim Kinchen said the body was identified by two women co-workers at the bank who said they last saw Strother about 11 a. m. on the beach. The body was spotted about 4 p. m. by a group of fisherman on a pier.

Strother had been employed at the Florida Banking and Trust Company for the past three months.

Coroner A. J. Bennett ruled the death an accidental drowning.

Keegan Criticizes Stadium Conditions

Finance Commissioner William V. Keegan, speaking "as a private citizen" yesterday urged the Board of Education to correct "conditions under Fort Hill High School stadium."

Keegan spoke out at yesterday's meeting of the Mayor and Council, and referred particularly to Thanksgiving Day when approximately 8,000 persons witnessed the annual Fort Hill-Allegany football game.

Keegan said toilet facilities are insufficient for a crowd that size and, he added, a number of holes in the walkways should be filled with concrete.

Keegan also hit at the crowding, pushing and shoving under the stadium at halftime. He said he personally had helped several women and children out of the way to keep them from being trampled.

Salvation Army Plans Kettle Collection

The Salvation Army received permission from the Mayor and Council yesterday to have "Kettle Houses" on Baltimore Street and Virginia Avenue.

The Army annually sets up the collection depots as part of its program to assist the needy at Christmas.

The Baltimore Street unit will be at the corner of Baltimore and Centre Street.

Local 26 To Meet

Local 26, United Rubber Workers of America (CIO), will hold an executive board meeting Thursday at 7 p. m., and on Saturday at 7:30 p. m. a membership meeting will be held, according to William G. Rice, president.

The tittle is the fine, minute stroke which often distinguishes one letter from another in the Hebrew alphabet.

Hagerstown Man Is Jailed In Default Of Traffic Fine

A Hagerstown man who went to Police Headquarters here Saturday to pay a parking ticket and was nabbed for drunken driving as he left was found guilty in Trial Magistrate's Court yesterday and sentenced to 30 days when unable to pay his fine.

Court attaches said the man, Michael James Murray, gave the name "Simon Kenny" to city officers when posting bond on the parking charge.

Magistrate J. Milton Dick fined Murray $100 plus $1.45 costs and ordered him to jail when he was unable to pay.

Because he appeared under the influence of drink, city officers cautioned the man not to drive his vehicle away from Police Headquarters after he had posted the overtime parking bond. But he walked rather unsteadily to the car, got in and drove away, they said. The drunk driving charge followed.

Area W. Va. Alumni Group Plans To Expand Activities

David W. Jacobs, secretary of the West Virginia University Alumni Association at Morgantown, has issued a special invitation to alumni leaders and former students of the university residing in Hampshire, Mineral, Grant and Hardy counties, to attend the Potomac Chapter meeting here Thursday at 8:30 p. m. in the recreation room of the Cumberland Brewing Company.

Plans to expand activities of Potomac Chapter to cover neighboring counties in West Virginia as well as Western Maryland will be discussed at a dinner Jacobs will hold earlier Thursday evening with chapter officers and representatives from nearby counties.

Laurence G. Reed, president of Potomac Chapter, has announced that Thursday's informal program will include the showing of movies of this year's West Virginia-Penn State football game with the narration by Robert "Red" Brown, Mountaineer varsity basketball coach and assistant football coach, who scouted Penn State for West Virginia.

Another feature of the program, Reed added, will be a talk by Secretary Jacobs outlining ticket distribution plans and travel arrangements for West Virginia's Sugar Bowl clash with Georgia Tech at New Orleans on New Year's Day.

"We are hoping to make Thursday's meeting the biggest we've had since the chapter was organized," Reed said today. "The meeting is open to all graduates and former students of West Virginia, members of their families and friends. In fact, a number of Penn State graduates have, made inquiries about the movies, and we've told them they will be welcome."

five shots into the air, hoping to attract her husband and his companion, but was unable to do so. She then began to crawl toward the party's automobile to seek aid.

Leaves Note For Husband

A lone hunter found Mrs. Martin in the woods and carried her to the highway nearby, a passing truck was flagged down and the woman was taken to the hospital. The hunter left a note on the steering wheel of the Martin automobile to inform her husband of the accident.

The husband arrived at the hospital about 4:30 that afternoon. His wife's condition was reported as "good," although she was still in shock and suffering from loss of blood.

Trooper F. W. Armstrong of the Elkins detachment of the State Police later reported that Jack Martin, about 35 of near Beverly, W. Va., was wounded by a stray bullet as he was showing a group of hunters a path through the woodlands near his farm.

As the group approached the woods a fusillade of shots rang out and Martin was hit in the right hip. The hunters with him took him to Memorial General Hospital in Elkins where he was reported "good." Attaches said the slug had passed through the body without striking any bones.

In all West Virginia counted a total of five persons dead and at least seven others injured Monday night as the first day of the state's deer hunting season came to a close.

Two of the victims were shot; three died of heart attacks while hunting.

Dr. William H. Wallis, 48, a Philippi dentist, dropped over while walking with two other hunters in the Bruceton Mills section of Preston County. His companions both cousins, said he collapsed while carrying only his gun.

Vito Gaoli, 63, a Carmichael, Pa., restaurant owner, was found dead over a deer which he had just shot in the Kingsville section of Randolph County. Charles L. Leonard, Randolph County coroner said he apparently died from a heart attack while carrying his deer from the woods.

Another heart attack victim was Hugh Sylvester Townsend, 63-year-old Vienna, W. Va., carpenter who was hunting in Wood County.

Accidentally shot was Daniel Rollins, 19, of Smithburg, W. Va.

Rollins was killed in an accident on Maxwell Ridge near West Union, in the north central part of the state.

More than 100,000 hunters were expected to take to the woods and mountains during the three-day season. Conservation authorities said they would bag a record 20,000 deer.

to practice speaking it. Her roommate speaks only Spanish.

Although she's still battling with vocabulary problems, Miss Yamada's English grammar is nearly flawless, and her friends already have nicknamed her "Kay."

Hopes To Continue Visit

Miss Yamada hopes to study in the U. S. for another three or four years if financial problems don't get in the way. Then she wants to go back to Japan and combine concert work with teaching.

So far, she's been fortunate in avoiding severe financial problems. She paid her own passage to the U. S. The Maryland Federation of Music Clubs sponsored her entry into the country and arranged for her living expenses during her first year here, so she could study at Peabody Conservatory in Baltimore.

The Friends of Japan awarded her a scholarship last summer to help her to continue her studies in violin with William Kroll, head of the Peabody violin department. Peabody has given her another scholarship for the current year. While at Peabody, she's been playing with the Peabody Trio and Quartet and with the conservatory's orchestra, and has made several concert apearances in the state.

Western Music Popular

Japan, says Miss Yamada, has plenty of audiences for concert work. Western music, even its classical forms, has become very popular in Japan in the last several years. Her own favorite composer is Brahms.

In tonight's performance, Miss Yamada will play the final (Allegro) movement of Mendelssohn's "Concerto In E Minor," Kreisler's "Rondino," based on a Beethoven theme, the Bach "Arioso," and Sarasate's popular "Zigeunerweisen."

Her performance will occupy the middle portion of the program. The orchestra, conducted by S. Lua Syckes, will open with Beethoven's "Coriolanus Overture," followed by the same composer's "Symphony No. 1 in C Major." The final portion of the program will include compositions by Cole Porter, Victor Herbert, Leroy Anderson and Saint-Saens.

National Safety Council Proposes Christmas Savings Plan To Prevent Accidents

To prevent the reckless spending of lives every Christmas, the National Safety Council today called on Americans to join in a nationwide Christmas savings plan to stop accidents.

The Council's yuletide ledger shows a loss of 740 lives, from all accidents, during the Christmas holidays last year—and the toll of 556 lives in traffic was the highest on record.

"It is time," New H. Dearborn, Council president, said, "for America to start saving—and stop squandering—lives. If every American will join this savings plan before the Christmas holidays, a real yuletide bonus—human life—will be paid."

One hundred and sixty-three national organizations, city and state officials, safety councils and civic leaders have joined the Council in the Christmas savings plan. They will unite in creating an awareness of the special holiday hazards, and will enlist voluntary cooperation from every American to hold accidents to a minimum.

The Christmas-New Year holiday season is the most hazardous single period of the year, according to Council statistics. In traffic accidents alone, twice as many persons are killed during a Christmas holiday period as on the same days of the preceding two weeks.

Hearvier travel and the festive spirit of the holiday season increase the normal winter hazards, such as bad weather, slippery roads and more hours of darkness.

The Council suggests four safety measures for Christmas pleasures:

1. Start automobile trips early and take it easy. Be extremely cautious in bad weather and darkness. Watch out for pedestrians.

2. Keep Christmas trees in water and away from fire. Be sure lights and electrical connections are in good condition.

3. Watch out for falls, at home. Be wary of icy sidewalks. Falls are second only to traffic as accident killers.

4. Be moderate in drinking, and don't drive if you have been drinking. Tipsy pedestrians and drinking drivers are most common during the holidays.

Majors Draft 13 Minor League Players For $132,500

Pirates Claim Gerald Lynch, Piedmont Loop Batting Champ

A's Obtain Jacobs, Royals' 2nd Sacker; Lint Goes To Cards

By JACK HAND

ATLANTA, Nov. 30 (AP)—The major league dipped into the minor league talent pool for 13 players at an investment of $132,500 today in the annual bargain sale that opens the winter baseball meetings.

Baltimore, heir to the St. Louis Browns' No. 1 pick, nabbed second baseman Vinicio Garcia, a .305 hitter at Shreveport in the Texas League. The Orioles also took 30-year-old outfielder Chuck Diering, former Giant and Cardinal, from San Francisco. Diering played the 1953 season at Minneapolis where he hit a surprising .322.

Detroit, Cleveland, the Chicago White Sox and Baltimore each drafted two men and the Philadelphia A's one for a total of nine by American League clubs. The National picked only four, one each by Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis. Seven clubs passed when their names were called, including the world champion New York Yankees and pennant winning Brooklyn Dodgers.

Five pitchers, five infielders and three outfielders were selected, two more than the 1952 draft of 11 players for $120,000.

Pirates Draft Lynch

Branch Rickey, Jr., of Pittsburgh picked a bright young New York Yankee prospect when he took outfielder Gerald Lynch from the Kansas City list. Lynch led the Piedmont League in hitting with a .333 mark at Norfolk last season and set the pace with 180 hits, 33 doubles, 22 triples, 113 runs batted in and 320 total bases. He also hit 21 home runs.

Cleveland may have grabbed a "sleeper" in shortstop Tom Korczowski, a New York Giants' farmhand off their Minneapolis list.

The Indians actually went down to Class A to get the infielder who played with Wilkes-Barre, Pa. of the Eastern League last year and batted .285. Cleveland's other selection was right-handed pitcher Don Fracchia, a 15-12 performer at Beaumont in the Texas League. Fracchia is a former third baseman.

Athletics Get Jacobs

The Brooklyn chain lost two men when the Athletics selected second baseman Forrest Jacobs from Montreal and Cincinnati took right-handed pitcher Jim Melton from St. Paul. Jacobs played at Ft. Worth and hit .282 before the Brooks moved him up to Montreal. Melton had a 10-10 record and a 4.40 earned run average at Mobile of the Southern.

Detroit went for infield protection, drafting first baseman Charlie Kress (.317) from the Cards' Rochester farm and infielder Harry Bright (.295 at Memphis) from the Charleston, W. Va. club of the American Association.

Frank Lang dug deep for some lefthanded pitching to balance the Chicago White Sox staff, taking Al Sima, who had a 2-3 record with Washington last year, from the Chattanooga list and Jocko Thompson (10-4), the ex-Phillie, from Baltimore.

Cardinals Grab Lint

Royce Lint, top winner of all the drafted pitchers with a 22-10 record at Portland of the Pacific Coast League, was taken by the St. Louis Cards who are on the hunt for pitching strength.

The Chicago Cubs selected Luis Marquez, former Boston Braves outfielder, from Toledo of the American Association. Marquez hit .292, stole 37 bases and drove in 81 runs last season.

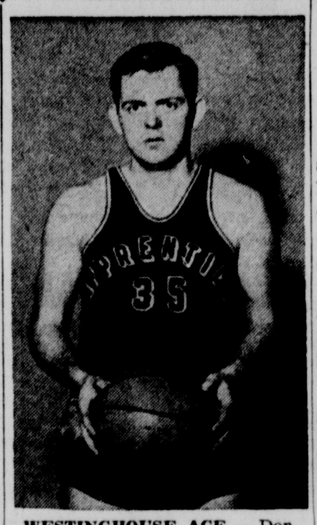
Bonneau Peters, owner of the Shreveport Club that lost Garcia on Baltimore's first pick was enthusiastic about the young man's chances in the big league. "He's the best second baseman in the minors and maybe in all baseball," said Peters. Garcia is a Mexican who was bought from Juarez four years ago.

The draft session was the only real business of the day, although many leagues met in closed sessions to decide how they wanted to vote on the amendments that will be considered Thursday.

Ints Are Undecided

The International League failed to solve its dilemma about its 1954 setup after listening to representatives of Havana and Richmond.

The meeting was adjourned until Wednesday with the issue still hanging.



WESTINGHOUSE ACE — Don DeZort, former Central Catholic High (Pittsburgh) star, will be seen in the lineup of Westinghouse Apprentice School quint when the Pennsylvanians invade this section for games Thursday and Friday at Frostburg and Keyser. The A's meet Frostburg State Teachers at Beall High Thursday and test Potomac State Friday. Westinghouse will present a veteran outfit reinforced with several of last season's Western Pennsylvania scholastic aces. The A's coached by "Bucky" Dearbeck, former Potomac State athlete, and Lido Bendinelli, won two games in this section last season, downing Frostburg Teachers, 67-57, and Potomac State, 90-81.

Lewis Predicts Bangup Battle In Sugar Bowl

Opines Mountaineers Have Good Team

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 30 (AP) — Coach Art Lewis of West Virginia University said here today his Mountaineers have "a damn good team," one capable of giving Georgia Tech a bang up football game in the Sugar Bowl New Year's Day.

Lewis told the Monday Quarterback Club:

"I know most of you are wondering what kind of team we have. I want to tell you we have a damn good one. Our boys would be a credit to any university.

"Some of them have never been out of the hills and you can't tell what will happen when they get down to this part of the country. No matter what happens, they'll be hitting hard New Year's Day."

Recalling the defeat by South Carolina, the Mountaineers only loss, Lewis said, "We gave them too many chances."

"After losing to South Carolina," Lewis said, "we walked up Spurce Alley where we couldn't be seen by the alumni. After getting the Sugar Bowl invitation, we walk down the main street and some of the alumni even tip their hats to us.

"I hope you don't judge us until after you see us. Then you might like some of the alumni, get on our band wagon."

Howard Ector, Georgia Tech business manager, said "We'll do our best to make the game here New Year's Day an interesting one."

West Virginia will train on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and coach Lewis left this afternoon to inspect training sites. He said the Mountaineers probably would reach the coast about Dec. 20.

Georgia Tech will train at home and come directly to New Orleans about Dec. 28.

Referee Halts Bout At Brooklyn Arena

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (INS)—Sharp-punching Freddy (Babe) Herman of Los Angeles registered a ninth-round technical knockout over Canada's Brian Kelly in a scheduled ten-round lightweight match at the Brooklyn Eastern Parkway Arena.

The more-experienced Herman, recording his 16th ko in 86 fights, floored the 21-year old Canadian once in the eighth and twice in the ninth before the referee stopped the bout at 2:25 of the ninth round.

Herman had been the aggressor all the way, but the counter-punching Kelly had caused the 24-year-old Californian trouble with a flicking left jab and a right to the body.

Herman weighed in a 139, two pounds heavier than Kelly.

The fight was televised to part of the country by Dumont.

344 Deer Slain On Opening Day In Mineral Co.

Twin Sisters, Brothers Bag Four Whitetails

Three hundred and forty-four deer were slain yesterday as the three-day open season on the animals got under way in Mineral County, W. Va.

Claude Rice, conservation officer of Keyser, announced that the majority of the kills checked at seven of the eight stations were bucks. Ninety-four were checked at Keyser and 93 at Fort Ashby. Cards were not available to ascertain the number of bucks and doe killed at the latter place but the males outnumbered the females at Keyser, 52-42.

Twin sisters and brothers accounted for four of the deer bagged on opening day. Mrs. Sadie Bowman and Miss Ada Taylor, of Burlington, each bagged a buck while Allen and Alvin Rohrbaugh, of near Ridgeville, brought in a buck and doe.

Rice announced the arrest of three men on Sunday night, charged with carrying loaded guns in their car. Those apprehended were Walter C. Shupe, 33, and John L. Shupe, 40, of Washington, D. C., and Luther Borrow, 42, of Route 2, Keyser. The conservation officer said the shotguns were loaded with buckshot and there was a flashlight in the vehicle. The trio was cited to appear before Magistrate Madalyn Bazzell.

Here's the breakdown on Mineral County's deer kill for opening day:

WHEN Robert Kirtley, Allegany quarterback, was named back-of-the-week for his outstanding performance in the Thanksgiving Day football game here, he became the third player to earn the nod of the Knights of Columbus Selection Committee for the third time in one season.

This is the sixth year for the K. of C. Award and in the past five years the two players that were cited thrice in one season were Lynn Beightol, of Fort Hill, in 1950 and Richard "Dickie" Beard of Fort Hill in 1951.

Those chosen as linemen and backs of the week qualify as nominees for the Player of the Year Award which will be presented this month.

Fort Hill gridders have taken this award four straight years. Earl "Lefty" Bruce of Allegany was the first winner in 1948. Beightol earned it in 1949 and 1950, Bill Lee of Fort Hill was the 1951 winner and John McVicker of the Sentinels copped it last year.

A FOOTBALL FAN wants to know if LaSalle and Beall ever played a morning game on Thanksgiving Day at Frostburg.

The LaSalle-Beall Turkey Day series started in 1946 but all games have been played in the afternoon. The first three years the games were played at Frostburg State Teachers College Field but since 1949 the schools have played at Beall High Field.

LaSalle, however, did engage in two morning games on Thanksgiving Day with Keyser High. The first was at Keyser in 1937 at 10 o'clock. The Keyser-LaSalle game of 1939 was played at the local stadium at 9:45. Allegany and Fort Hill met there at 2:30.

In 1934, the year LaSalle and Allegany broke off grid relations, there were two games on Thanksgiving at Community Park. Penn Avenue and Allegany played in the morning and LaSalle met Thomas in the afternoon. In 1936 LaSalle had the afternoon game with Keyser while Allegany and Fort Hill tangled in the morning.

SALVATORE (Sal) Somma, native of Ridgeley, came up with one of the outstanding high school teams in Greater New York this season.

His New Dorp (Staten Island) Centrals wound up the campaign with a 5-1-1 record and in a fitting finale trimmed their Richmond Borough rivals, Curtis High School, by the score of 27-7.

Somma's eleven beat James Madison, 31-6, New Utrecht 27-7, Tilden 25-0, Manual Training 39-6 and Curtis. The loss was to St. John's Prep, 7-0, and the tie was with Lafayette, 13-13.

"Sal" has turned out four undefeated teams in 11 years of coaching. He had two at Curtis High (1940 and 1941); one at Mt. St. Joseph's, Vermont (1946) and one at New Dorp in 1949. In five years at New Dorp his teams have won 25, lost six and tied five.

At Curtis High he made the All-City team two years and it was his educated toe that gave New York U. a 7-6 victory over Fordham and knocked the Rams out of a chance to go to the Rose Bowl.

THE BERKELEY County Board of Trade brought the rasslers to Martinsburg recently to raise money for the scoreboard and clock fund at Cobourn Field and the affair turned out to be a flop.

Promoters went into the red to the extent of $93.03 and the fund gained exactly nothing.

NAMES of basketball teams on the road this season seem to get funnier.

For instance, we have the Tobacco Road Tramps, World Wide Hoboes, Zulu Colored Giants, Newark Mules and the Georgia Chain Gang.

TONY WAKEMAN, 43, who died in a Miami, Fla., hospital the other day, was one of Pittsburgh's foremost contributors to the early days of radio and was a success in his field at the age of 22.

Tony was "Uncle Gimbee" to thousands of fans and in 1931 was called "the most popular children's entertainer in the country."

In 1937 he went to Washington to become one of the leading radio and television sports announcers in the country. Three months ago he went to Coral Gables, Fla., to take a job as announcer at Miami.

While broadcasting the Army-Notre Dame football game in 1934 from the 50-yard line, two over-enthuiastic fans threw the radio crew out, cursed into the "mikes" and tore out the telephone lines.

Two years later, Wakeman gained network recognition when he described the Johnstown flood from a rooftop.

Tony participated in football and track at Penn State after spending several years at Duquesne University.

ELKINS and Allegany continue their football series next year. The game is set for Elkins on November 5.

JAMES J. "Jimmie" Long, publicity director of the Pittsburgh Pirates, and former Sun-Tele sports columnist, writes:

"Thanks for the nice 'As You Were' article on Nick Maddox.

"I heartily agree with that nice item you ran about Harry Greb. Have often thought of the thrills he would give present day boxing fans if he were alive today and they could see him on television.

"If they thought Chuck Davey was something before his real ring tests disillusioned them, Greb would just about drive them wild."

KENNY RIDENOUR expects to have two former University of Maryland cage aces in his lineup when the Hagerstown Cabineers, semi-pro-quint, opens the season with the St. Louis Bombers in the Hub City December 6.

Ridenour reports that Don Moran, former W.M.I. League star from Bruce High who played on the Terps' varsity squad and Lee Brawley, also an ex-College Parker, will play Sunday ball for the Cabineers.

JOHNNY "High Pockets" Mullaney, of the Windsor Hotel Mullaneys, called the other day and said he thought we muffed one when we failed to mention Cletus "Vic" May, the one-time LaSalle High goalie, among those whom we thought might qualify for Maryland's Soccer Hall of Fame.

"Vic" really was a topnotch goaltender in his high school days and we've never seen anyone who could punch a soccer ball with his bare fist for greater distance.

In those days it was legal for the opposition to knock the goalie down and trample him but the dapper "Vic" had the habit of snaring the ball, side-stepping and then disposing of the leather by punching it far out on the playing field.

Mullaney recalls the day "Vic" was playing in Barton and during a goal rush the iron pipe that was used as a crossbar, fell and struck him on the noggin. "Vic" was groggy from the blow but that guy simply wouldn't quit.

Terps Scared To Death Of Oklahoma, Tatum Says

Both Coaches Claim Roles Of Underdogs

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 30 (AP) — Coaches Jim Tatum of Maryland and Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma flew into town today to make plans for their Orange Bowl football meeting and each claimed to be the underdog.

"My boys are scared to death of Oklahoma," Tatum told newsmen as he stepped off a plane. "The Sooners ought to be the favorites."

The Maryland coach, whose team was voted No. 1 in the nation in the Associated Press poll after winding up with ten straight victories, shrugged that off with the declaration that "I don't think we played any team as good as Oklahoma."

Wilkinson, who arrived an hour earlier, said he figured his Sooners "will have to sharpen their passing attack because they'll never be able to run against Maryland."

He said he knew enough about Maryland "to know we ought to be underdogs by a big margin."

Tatum, told later about Wilkinson's statement, said "Oklahoma won't have any trouble running against us. They've got blinding speed. The backs are all so fast but I couldn't tell you which is the fastest."

He added that Oklahoma "has changed its personnel and is a much better team than when it lost to Notre Dame." That was the Sooners' only defeat.

Gilmer Will Rejoin Redskins On Sunday

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Washington Redskins reported today, with a certain amount of glee, that Harry Gilmer will play Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles in the battle for second place in the Eastern Division of the National Football League.

Gilmer, the former University of Alabama star, has missed the first 10 Redskins' games as the result of a broken ankle suffered in preseason play.

Majors Draft 13 Minor League Players For $132,500

Pirates Claim Gerald Lynch, Piedmont Loop Batting Champ

A's Obtain Jacobs, Royals' 2nd Sacker; Lint Goes To Cards

By JACK HAND

ATLANTA, Nov. 30 (AP)—The major league dipped into the minor league talent pool for 13 players at an investment of $132,500 today in the annual bargain sale that opens the winter baseball meetings.

Baltimore, heir to the St. Louis Browns' No. 1 pick, nabbed second baseman Vinicio Garcia, a .305 hitter at Shreveport in the Texas League. The Orioles also took 30-year-old outfielder Chuck Diering, former Giant and Cardinal, from San Francisco. Diering played the 1953 season at Minneapolis where he hit a surprising .322.

Detroit, Cleveland, the Chicago White Sox and Baltimore each drafted two men and the Philadelphia A's one for a total of nine by American League clubs. The National picked only four, one each by Pittsburgh, Chicago, Cincinnati and St. Louis. Seven clubs passed when their names were called, including the world champion New York Yankees and pennant winning Brooklyn Dodgers.

Five pitchers, five infielders and three outfielders were selected, two more than the 1952 draft of 11 players for $120,000.

Pirates Draft Lynch

Branch Rickey, Jr., of Pittsburgh picked a bright young New York Yankee prospect when he took outfielder Gerald Lynch from the Kansas City list. Lynch led the Piedmont League in hitting with a .333 mark at Norfolk last season and set the pace with 180 hits, 33 doubles, 22 triples, 113 runs batted in and 320 total bases. He also hit 21 home runs.

Cleveland may have grabbed a "sleeper" in shortstop Tom Korczowski, a New York Giants' farmhand off their Minneapolis list.

The Indians actually went down to Class A to get the infielder who played with Wilkes-Barre, Pa. of the Eastern League last year and batted .285. Cleveland's other selection was right-handed pitcher Don Fracchia, a 15-12 performer at Beaumont in the Texas League. Fracchia is a former third baseman.

Athletics Get Jacobs

The Brooklyn chain lost two men when the Athletics selected second baseman Forrest Jacobs from Montreal and Cincinnati took right-handed pitcher Jim Melton from St. Paul. Jacobs played at Ft. Worth and hit .282 before the Brooks moved him up to Montreal. Melton had a 10-10 record and a 4.40 earned run average at Mobile of the Southern.

Detroit went for infield protection, drafting first baseman Charlie Kress (.317) from the Cards' Rochester farm and infielder Harry Bright (.295 at Memphis) from the Charleston, W. Va. club of the American Association.

Frank Lang dug deep for some lefthanded pitching to balance the Chicago White Sox staff, taking Al Sima, who had a 2-3 record with Washington last year, from the Chattanooga list and Jocko Thompson (10-4), the ex-Phillie, from Baltimore.

Cardinals Grab Lint

Royce Lint, top winner of all the drafted pitchers with a 22-10 record at Portland of the Pacific Coast League, was taken by the St. Louis Cards who are on the hunt for pitching strength.

The Chicago Cubs selected Luis Marquez, former Boston Braves outfielder, from Toledo of the American Association. Marquez hit .292, stole 37 bases and drove in 81 runs last season.

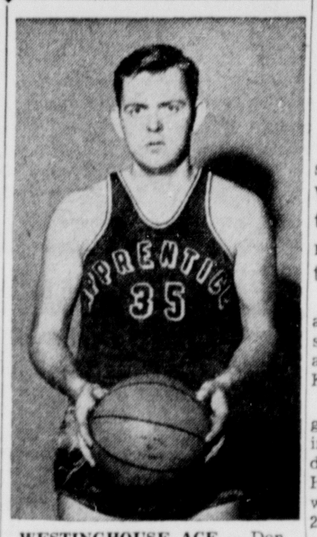
Bonneau Peters, owner of the Shreveport Club that lost Garcia on Baltimore's first pick was enthusiastic about the young man's chances in the big league. "He's the best second baseman in the minors and maybe in all baseball," said Peters. Garcia is a Mexican who was bought from Juarez four years ago.

The draft session was the only real business of the day, although many leagues met in closed sessions to decide how they wanted to vote on the amendments that will be considered Thursday.

Ints Are Undecided

The International League failed to solve its dilemma about its 1954 setup after listening to representatives of Havana and Richmond.

The meeting was adjourned until Wednesday with the issue still hanging.



WESTINGHOUSE ACE — Don DeZort, former Central Catholic High (Pittsburgh) star, will be seen in the lineup of Westinghouse Apprentice School quint when the Pennsylvanians invade this section for games Thursday and Friday at Frostburg and Keyser. The A's meet Frostburg State Teachers at Beall High Thursday and test Potomac State Friday. Westinghouse will present a veteran outfit reinforced with several of last season's Western Pennsylvania scholastic aces. The A's coached by "Bucky" Dearbeck, former Potomac State athlete, and Lido Bendinelli, won two games in this section last season, downing Frostburg Teachers, 67-57, and Potomac State, 90-81.

Lewis Predicts Bangup Battle In Sugar Bowl

Opines Mountaineers Have Good Team

Lewis told the Monday Quarterback Club:

"I know most of you are wondering what kind of team we have. I want to tell you we have a damn good one. Our boys would be a credit to any university.

"Some of them have never been out of the hills and you can't tell what will happen when they get down to this part of the country. No matter what happens, they'll be hitting hard New Year's Day."

Recalling the defeat by South Carolina, the Mountaineers only loss, Lewis said, "We gave them too many chances."

"After losing to South Carolina," Lewis said, "we walked up Spurce Alley where we couldn't be seen by the alumni. After getting the Sugar Bowl invitation, we walk down the main street and some of the alumni even tip their hats to us.

"I hope you don't judge us until after you see us. Then you might like some of the alumni, get on our band wagon."

Howard Ector, Georgia Tech business manager, said "We'll do our best to make the game here New Year's Day an interesting one."

West Virginia will train on the Mississippi Gulf Coast and coach Lewis left this afternoon to inspect training sites. He said the Mountaineers probably would reach the coast about Dec. 20.

Georgia Tech will train at home and come directly to New Orleans about Dec. 28.

Referee Halts Bout At Brooklyn Arena

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (INS)—Sharp-punching Freddy (Babe) Herman of Los Angeles registered a ninth-round technical knockout over Canada's Brian Kelly in a scheduled ten-round lightweight match at the Brooklyn Eastern Parkway Arena.

The more-experienced Herman, recording his 16th ko in 86 fights, floored the 21-year old Canadian once in the eighth and twice in the ninth before the referee stopped the bout at 2:25 of the ninth round.

Herman had been the aggressor all the way, but the counter-punching Kelly had caused the 24-year-old Californian trouble with a flicking left jab and a right to the body.

Herman weighed in a 139, two pounds heavier than Kelly.

The fight was televised to part of the country by Dumont.

Penn Avenue and Allegany played in the morning and LaSalle met Thomas in the afternoon. In 1936 LaSalle had the afternoon game with Keyser while Allegany and Fort Hill tangled in the morning.

SALVATORE (Sal) Somma, native of Ridgeley, came up with one of the outstanding high school teams in Greater New York this season.

His New Dorp (Staten Island) Centrals wound up the campaign with a 5-1-1 record and in a fitting finale trimmed their Richmond Borough rivals, Curtis High School, by the score of 27-7.

Somma's eleven beat James Madison, 31-6, New Utrecht 27-7, Tilden 25-0, Manual Training 39-6 and Curtis. The loss was to St. John's Prep, 7-0, and the tie was with Lafayette, 13-13.

"Sal" has turned out four undefeated teams in 11 years of coaching. He had two at Curtis High (1940 and 1941); one at Mt. St. Joseph's, Vermont (1946) and one at New Dorp in 1949. In five years at New Dorp his teams have won 25, lost six and tied five.

At Curtis High he made the All-City team two years and it was his educated toe that gave New York U. a 7-6 victory over Fordham and knocked the Rams out of a chance to go to the Rose Bowl.

THE BERKELEY County Board of Trade brought the rasslers to Martinsburg recently to raise money for the scoreboard and clock fund at Cobourn Field and the affair turned out to be a flop.

Promoters went into the red to the extent of $93.03 and the fund gained exactly nothing.

NAMES of basketball teams on the road this season seem to get funnier.

For instance, we have the Tobacco Road Tramps, World Wide Hoboes, Zulu Colored Giants, Newark Mules and the Georgia Chain Gang.

TONY WAKEMAN, 43, who died in a Miami, Fla., hospital the other day, was one of Pittsburgh's foremost contributors to the early days of radio and was a success in his field at the age of 22.

Tony was "Uncle Gimbee" to thousands of fans and in 1931 was called "the most popular children's entertainer in the country."

In 1937 he went to Washington to become one of the leading radio and television sports announcers in the country. Three months ago he went to Coral Gables, Fla., to take a job as announcer at Miami.

While broadcasting the Army-Notre Dame football game in 1934 from the 50-yard line, two over-enthuiastic fans threw the radio crew out, cursed into the "mikes" and tore out the telephone lines.

Terps Scared To Death Of Oklahoma, Tatum Says

Both Coaches Claim Roles Of Underdogs

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 30 (AP) — Coaches Jim Tatum of Maryland and Bud Wilkinson of Oklahoma flew into town today to make plans for their Orange Bowl football meeting and each claimed to be the underdog.

"My boys are scared to death of Oklahoma," Tatum told newsmen as he stepped off a plane. "The Sooners ought to be the favorites."

The Maryland coach, whose team was voted No. 1 in the nation in the Associated Press poll after winding up with ten straight victories, shrugged that off with the declaration that "I don't think we played any team as good as Oklahoma."

Wilkinson, who arrived an hour earlier, said he figured his Sooners "will have to sharpen their passing attack because they'll never be able to run against Maryland."

He said he knew enough about Maryland "to know we ought to be underdogs by a big margin."

Tatum, told later about Wilkinson's statement, said "Oklahoma won't have any trouble running against us. They've got blinding speed. The backs are all so fast but I couldn't tell you which is the fastest."

He added that Oklahoma "has changed its personnel and is a much better team than when it lost to Notre Dame." That was the Sooners' only defeat.

Gilmer Will Rejoin Redskins On Sunday

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 (AP)—The Washington Redskins reported today, with a certain amount of glee, that Harry Gilmer will play Sunday against the Philadelphia Eagles in the battle for second place in the Eastern Division of the National Football League.

Gilmer, the former University of Alabama star, has missed the first 10 Redskins' games as the result of a broken ankle suffered in preseason play.

Lewis Is Voted Coach Of Year In Conference

West Virginia Mentor Is Chosen By Writers

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 30 (AP)—Art (Pappy) Lewis, who guided West Virginia University to the conference championship and the best record in Mountaineer history, today was named the Southern Conference Coach of the Year by the Southern Sports Writers Association.

Lewis was voted the honor by the association on the 17 ballots of sports writers, sportscasters and college publicity men.

Lewis, however, had a much closer battle for his honor than he did for the conference team championship. His 48 points were just enough to edge Jackie Freeman of William and Mary, who had 43 points.

Bill Young of Furman was third with 21 points, followed by Ed Merrick of Richmond, 17, Frank Moseley of Virginia Tech, 12, and John McKenna of Virginia Military, 7.

The Sugar Bowl-bound Lewis will be honored at the annual banquet of the Southern Conference at its Dec. 11 meeting in Richmond, Va.

Augie Galun Named Coach Of Athletics

ATLANTA, Nov. 30 (AP) — Augie Galan, veteran major league outfielder-infielder and 1953 manager of Oakland of the Pacific Coast League, today was named a coach of the Philadelphia A's by Manager Eddie Joost.

Galan joined Wally Moses on the coaching staff being organized by Joost, new A's manager. A pitching coach, to be named later, will complete the staff.

Joost said Galan had been released by Oakland Saturday to take the new job. Before managing Oakland, Galan served as a coach at Oakland in 1952. He formerly played with Chicago, Brooklyn and Cincinnati in the National League.

ART LEWIS
Head Football Coach

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(INS)—Now that the football season is over except for a few isolated games and the various bowl games, we can safely take a look at the one-platoon system.

Some of the die-hard football coaches who like the two-platoon system still retain their dislike for the new order, particularly if they had losing seasons.

But the fans were in overwhelming favor of it and we feel sure it will be retained.

Only the other day Lou Little, Columbia's veteran coach and a member of the rules committee, admitted that the fans seemed to like it.

Lou was one of those who feared that the one-platoon vogue would work an extra hardship on the weaker teams. But it rarely worked out that way for the strong teams, except in a few cases, could not throw in a fresh squad with any confidence.

We noted that even Notre Dame, which has more football players than some colleges have students, stuck by its first team in that hard-fought tie with Iowa. If the two platoon system was ideal why didn't Frank Leahy send in his second or even his third stringers?

And Col. Red Blaik, a bitter foe of the two-platoon system, found he could play and win games using no more than 15 men and he had seven or eight who found no trouble in going all the way.

There was some fear, too, that even the most powerful players would never be able to stand up and take a beating for a full game.

But Lou Little's quarterback, Dick Carr, played every minute of every game throughout the season without harm. And Carr is not a giant. He weighs 180.

Moreover, Columbia had several linesmen with endurance records almost as good.

We had none of that senseless switching of players or even whole teams every time the ball changed hands and for the first time in many years we had not one or two individual players but whole squads who could play both offense and defense.

Under the old system there were boys who played their whole college careers on defense and knew nothing about offense. And vice versa.

This season the boys could run the game pretty much by themselves and a quarterback didn't have to wait—like the pros—for a coach to send in a new man with directions for the next play.

The players liked the change. So did the fans. They could identify the players as they never could under the two-platoon system and that added to the enjoyment of the game.

The one big mistake this year was the abolishment of spring training in many colleges. This gave an unfair advantage to colleges which had the early practice.

Chicago Sox Sign Marion

Former Browns Pilot Will Coach Pale Hose

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 30 (AP) — Marty Marion, who managed the last place St. Louis Browns in 1953, has been signed as coach of the Chicago White Sox, it was announced tonight.

Marion, who had piloted the St. Louis Cardinals to a third place finish in 1951 before joining the Browns as a player-coach in 1952, was dropped by the Baltimore Orioles after they inherited the Browns last month, although his three-year contract had another year to go.

Roger Cramer, who coached the White Sox last season, was dropped to make room for Marion. Cramer has been offered another job in the organization but has not yet made his decision.

Marion's salary was not disclosed but it undoubtedly will fall far short of his $35,000 salary with the Orioles. It was expected that the Baltimore club will make up the difference.

West Virginia Opens With Carnegie Quint

MORGANTOWN, W. Va., Nov. 30—West Virginia University begins its 51st season of basketball Wednesday night at home with Carnegie Tech. The freshmen also will open their season, meeting West Virginia Tech in the preliminary.

Paul Witting, Union, N. J., and Pete White of Clendenin also are scrapping for the center post, and if either of them looks good enough to make the lineup, Bergines will move to a forward slot and Becker return to guard.

The Little Mountaineers under Coach Quentin Barnette will feature 6-4 Rod Rundley of Charleston, 6-8 Dale Phares of Elkins, 6-5 Marc Constantine of Morgantown, Clayce Kishbaugh of Clarksburg, Bill King of Parkersburg and Jim Barnette, Chattaroy.

Lewis Is Voted Coach Of Year In Conference

West Virginia Mentor Is Chosen By Writers

GREENSBORO, N. C., Nov. 30 (AP)—Art (Pappy) Lewis, who guided West Virginia University to the conference championship and the best record in Mountaineer history today was named the Southern Conference Coach of the Year by the Southern Sports Writers Association.

Lewis was voted the honor by the association on the 17 ballots of sports writers, sportscasters and college publicity men.

Lewis, however, had a much closer battle for his honor than he did for the conference team championship. His 48 points were just enough to edge Jackie Freeman of William and Mary, who had 43 points.

Bill Young of Furman was third with 21 points, followed by Ed Merrick of Richmond, 17, Frank Moseley of Virginia Tech, 12, and John McKenna of Virginia Military, 7.

The Sugar Bowl-bound Lewis will be honored at the annual banquet of the Southern Conference at its Dec. 11 meeting in Richmond, Va.

By PAT ROBINSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 30—(INS)—Now that the football season is over except for a few isolated games and the various bowl games, we can safely take a look at the one-platoon system.

Some of the die-hard football coaches who like the two-platoon system still retain their dislike for the new order, particularly if they had losing seasons.

But the fans were in overwhelming favor of it and we feel sure it will be retained.

Only the other day Lou Little, Columbia's veteran coach and a member of the rules committee, admitted that the fans seemed to like it.

Lou was one of those who feared that the one-platoon vogue would work an extra hardship on the weaker teams. But it rarely worked out that way for the strong teams, except in a few cases, could not throw in a fresh squad with any confidence.

We noted that even Notre Dame, which has more football players than some colleges have students, stuck by its first team in that hard-fought tie with Iowa. If the two platoon system was ideal why didn't Frank Leahy send in his second or even his third stringers?

And Col. Red Blaik, a bitter foe of the two-platoon system, found he could play and win games using no more than 15 men and he had seven or eight who found no trouble in going all the way.

There was some fear, too, that even the most powerful players would never be able to stand up and take a beating for a full game.

But Lou Little's quarterback, Dick Carr, played every minute of every game throughout the season without harm. And Carr is not a giant. He weighs 180.

Moreover, Columbia had several linesmen with endurance records almost as good.

We had none of that senseless switching of players or even whole teams every time the ball changed hands and for the first time in many years we had not one or two individual players but whole squads who could play both offense and defense.

Under the old system there were boys who played their whole college careers on defense and knew nothing about offense. And vice versa.

This season the boys could run the game pretty much by themselves and a quarterback didn't have to wait—like the pros—for a coach to send in a new man with directions for the next play.

The players liked the change. So did the fans. They could identify the players as they never could under the two-platoon system and that added to the enjoyment of the game.

The one big mistake this year was the abolishment of spring training in many colleges. This gave an unfair advantage to colleges which had the early practice.

Augie Galun Named Coach Of Athletics

ATLANTA, Nov. 30 (AP) — Augie Galan, veteran major league outfielder-infielder and 1953 manager of Oakland of the Pacific Coast League, today was named a coach of the Philadelphia A's by Manager Eddie Joost.

Galan joined Wally Moses on the coaching staff being organized by Joost, new A's manager. A pitching coach, to be named later, will complete the staff.

Joost said Galan had been released by Oakland Saturday to take the new job. Before managing Oakland, Galan served as a coach at Oakland in 1952. He formerly played with Chicago, Brooklyn and Cincinnati in the National League.

Chicago Sox Sign Marion

Former Browns Pilot Will Coach Pale Hose

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 30 (AP) — Marty Marion, who managed the last place St. Louis Browns in 1953, has been signed as coach of the Chicago White Sox, it was announced tonight.

Marion, who had piloted the St. Louis Cardinals to a third place finish in 1951 before joining the Browns as a player-coach in 1952, was dropped by the Baltimore Orioles after they inherited the Browns last month, although his three-year contract had another year to go.

Roger Cramer, who coached the White Sox last season, was dropped to make room for Marion. Cramer has been offered another job in the organization but has not yet made his decision.

Marion's salary was not disclosed but it undoubtedly will fall far short of his $35,000 salary with the Orioles. It was expected that the Baltimore club will make up the difference.

S. Route 50, on Allegany Front Mountain, resulted in serious injury to a woman driver of a large tractor-trailer truck. Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Dorothy Manners

(Substituting for vacationing Louella Parsons)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 30 (INS)—Shelley Winters has so many beaux in "Play Girl" it wasn't definite until today, when Barry Sullivan was signed, which one was to get her.

They should pull pretty well in co-star harness having just finished "Executive Suite" together at MGM.

In addition to Barry, Shelley's leading men include Dick Long and Gregg Palmer.

Oddly enough, both Dick and Gregg are said to be carrying torches in private life. Dick's long romance with Suzan Ball has hit a snag. And Gregg and Jill Farber have called off wedding plans for reasons best known to themselves.

There are enough "Trilbys" scheduled for production to put you into a trance! British Producer George Minter comes along to say he's signed Robert Newton to play Svengali to an as yet unsigned Trilby starting in London in January!

Minter's version of the Du Maurier classic is ready to roll with script already completed by Noel Langley who will also direct, for Renown Pictures.

Warner Brothers just announced "Trilby" for Kathryn Grayson and James Mason. And Darryl Zanuck had a "Trilby" idea in mind — unless all this kills it.

Absolutely and positively no nightclub engagements for June Haver! This is the only type entertainment at which June is drawing the line. Otherwise she is ready, willing and able to come back to work.

Wouldn't you know that her agent, Ned Marin, is just being flooded with nightclub offers?

June prefers movies but will do television or radio. Later, she might be interested in a play.

She shakes her head, however, about talk involving her romantically with good looking merchant Joe Campbell. First, she wants to get back in stride with her career.

Chatter in Hollywood:

It's getting serious between Nora Flynn Haymes and Jennings Lang. I think I was in on the start of this romance in Palm Springs several weekends ago.

Nora had been going to parties with this beau or that one until one night at Scotty Rubin's her eyes met Jennings' "across a crowded room."

Next day they were playing tennis on the courts of the Racquet Club and apparently the "love" game has been going on ever since.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Lana Turner is having her personal wardrobe designed by Norman Hartnell, favorite stylist of Queen Elizabeth. His skirts for Lana are 15 inches from the floor! The queen's are 12.

Terry Moore will be with Nicky Hilton at the Panhandle dinner at the Ambassador Wednesday night.

Look for Bella Darvi to cop one of the top women roles in "The Egyptian."

Steve Cochran is being paged for "Sweet Poison" the Broadway show starring Maria Riva, Marlene's daughter. First, Steve has a date with a Los Angeles judge the 2nd of December to explain some erratic driving.

Love the story Norman Taurog tells about his 9-year-old Johnny, ardent member of the Cub Scouts: Johnny came home and told his father that 9-year-old Jeff Tone (Franchot's boy) had called his a "dirty, lowdown, no good Cub Scout." Johnny said to Norman, "Daddy, I don't think he should talk that way about the Cub Scouts, do you?"

Bob Neal is telling the world he's really gone on Debbie Reynolds—and he couldn't take his eyes off her at Ciro's the other night.

Shelley Winters with Michael Rennie and Tony Quinn enjoying Italian food at the Capri. Their respective mates are out of town.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Hearing Postponed

A hearing scheduled yesterday in Police Court for 12 persons involved in a melee last Friday near the strike-bound National Jet Company plant has been postponed until next Monday.

The hearing was postponed due to a number of city officials being required to appear in a case in Washington County Circuit Court at Hagerstown.

One letter simply stands for another. In this example A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Do you frown when you talk? Do you grimace with your mouth? Wrinkles are sure to be the results.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

"Is there any sure way to get rid of wrinkles around the mouth?" "What will erase frown or thinking lines between the brows?" These reader questions are related, distant though the lines are in the face.

In the first place, such lines indicate that you are expressing your thoughts with more than just your voice and your eyes. It is desirable to keep your eyes and lips as flexible as possible, but when you bring the rest of your face into the act, you are guilty of grimacing. Keep the rest of your face calm; keep it placid. Let your eyes, your voice and your choice of words convey your thoughts and meaning to others.

While you are improving your habits, eradicate the lines that have already formed. Here's how:

Be sure to keep the lined areas well-lubricated. Dip your fingers into a rich cream and then lightly, with a feather touch, stroke upward and outward over the lines. Allow the cream to remain on as long as you can.

Eradicating Lines

Now for special work:

In the case of frown lines, cut a piece of court plaster to fit the area between your eye brows and extend it about a half inch down the nose and up your forehead. Wear it whenever you are alone. After you have worn the plaster a number of times you will become conscious of the area in which it was placed to such extent that you will find yourself constantly trying to keep from frowning. Persevere and you will succeed and regain the smooth, young-looking brow that you covet.

For Mouth Lines

In the case of lines around the mouth, chew gum, whenever you are alone a whole package at once. This will force your cheeks, chin and lip areas to extend, smoothing out the lines. Also, at least once each hour, yawn as deeply and as widely as you can. Alternate these yawns by blowing against your lips with as much force as you can muster.

As a further reminder to all of you who have unwanted lines in your face, keep a mirror in your living room and a chair so placed that your eye can catch a glimpse of your image now and then whenever you are in conversation. Another mirror placed near the telephone will enable you to study and check your impulse to talk "with your whole face."

Everyone loves a person who is alight and animated. But never forget—the lighting should be in the eyes and the animation in the voice!

YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE

You can achieve an appealing, resonant, sonorous voice — one that can be a vibrant attribute to charm and success—by reading the new booklet, YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE, which gives complete instructions on how to overcome such wearisome speaking qualities as tonelessness, dullness and lack of proper modulation. Today In Washington

viously had served as chief of staff to General Eisenhower in Europe and then became ambassador to Moscow, where Davies was a member of the embassy staff—was up for confirmation as undersecretary of state, he testified publicly on February 4, 1953, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Several senators asked him about the Davies case. He stated that the episode had occurred before he took the directorship of the CIA, and that his impressions were gained from such records as were available, and that he had not talked with Davies. He said the Davies proposal theoretically might have worked but that his predecessor, Admiral Hillenkoetter, became alarmed and rejected it.

Undersecretary Smith testified that he was unable "to assess the motive" of Davies in proposing the plan, but that George F. Kennan, under whom Davies was serving at the time in the State Department, had written a letter to the loyalty board saying he felt some responsibility for Davies' work, though Kennan "did not specifically underwrite the Davies recommendation." Davies himself testified that the specific plan he advanced was not based on any direct instructions from anyone else.

Notwithstanding the friendly nature of Mr. Smith's testimony and the fact that the loyalty review board of the Truman administration last January formally stated that it had not found any ground to declare Davies ineligible for government service on loyalty grounds, Senator Jenner again wrote the Department of Justice on June 11, 1953, asking that the perjury indictment against Davies be pressed. William P. Rogers, deputy attorney general, wrote Senator Jenner on July 6, 1953, that the department was making a review of the case and had not reached any "final determination." The letters were made public last August.

Still Not Settled

That's where the matter rests today. It has not been clarified or settled, and Senator McCarthy was right in saying that John Paton Davies is still in government service, despite the testimony rendered against him. It is to be noted that the President's loyalty review board was never authorized to pass on any questions of "security," and in its letter to the State Department the board intimated that it questioned Davies' judgement. Subsequently Davies, who had been serving as deputy high commissioner in Germany, was transferred by Secretary of State Dulles to the American embassy in Peru, where he now is charge d'affaires. At one time Davies was ordered home from China at the request of Ambassador Hurley because of the latter's charge that Davies was too friendly to the Communist cause in China.

There is talk of another security investigation by the State Department, which it is reported Davies himself may formally request in order to clear up the matter.

Meanwhile Senator McCarthy stands wrongfully accused by "top White House staff members" who—though three days have elapsed since the attack attributed to them was broadcast to newspapers in every community — have not yet disavowed the several untruths which they allegedly inspired.

TV, Movies "Wed" But It Remains To Be Seen If Marriage Will Take

By BOB THOMAS

PALM SPRINGS, Calif., Nov. 30 (AP)—The wedding of television and motion picture industries has taken place in this desert resort town.

It remains to be seen whether the marriage will take.

Saturday night a new movie, "Forever Female," was premiered at the Plaza Theater. It was also shown on a special TV closed circuit at a cost of $1.25 per living room.

Some 70 subscribers to the Telemeter service plunked that much change into a coin box on their TV sets to see the movie.

Film executives galore were present to proclaim the event. Sam Goldwyn termed it "a historic occasion." It marked the first time that (1) a new movie has been seen on TV; and (2) money has been collected to see such entertainment on home sets.

Does this mean you will soon be seeing new movies on your TV set for a fee? Probably not.

The big problem is to get FCC approval. So far the FCC has ruled the air is free and no one can be charged for broadcasts. TV is distributed in Palm Springs by wire.

Another hurdle appears: What happens to movie theaters?

Telemeter, which is half-owned by Paramount, offers it solution. In Palm Springs, the local theater owner provides the film to be shown on pay-as-you-see TV. The movie plays in his theater and on TV the same night. He collects for both.

"Theaters have always been the backbone of our industry," assured Paramount President Barney Balaban at a press conference. But he added that ⅞ of the American public do not now see the average American film, and the movie industry is netting a "small, not very comfortable margin of profit."

Goldwyn, famed for his battles with theater owners, struck a grimer note: "Some exhibitors will go out of business. Some producers have gone out of business too, but no one shed any tears over them. You can't stop progress."

The film industry will be eyeing nervously the results of the Palm Springs operation. Telemeter says it is in business here to stay. It will provide new pictures, sports and other events for a fee. If results are satisfactory, it could mean the opening of a new era in the American entertainment industry.

Telemeter officials have glowing words about the potential. One of them mused: "Supposing 26 million sets were equipped with Telemeter. Supposing you had a good picture and spent $250,000 using all media to advertise it to the public. If you ran it on TV over a weekend, you might earn as much as 20 million dollars."

November cracked the fever chart for political capers. Both zero weather and the partisans had the same score. They stopped at nothing.

It started on the first Monday before the first Tuesday of the month. The prize was control of the House of Congress. While the GOP managed to win the Democrats were closer than a bite in a dog fight.

The modernistic school of applied smears dominated the exhibition of sculptured mud.

The boys got the smears working in three dimensions. Sticky, mean and unverified.

They named names and dated dates. They took the half-truth and fissioned it.

No man was safe who had ever accepted a rebate on a specked apple from the corner grocer. No man was secure who had ever written a letter to Santa Claus as a child. They called that influencing the witness.

That's the kind of politics I like. That's the kind we had back in Philadelphia when Boies Penrose and Matt Quay ran the works with a velvet blackjack.

Keeping Up With Hollywood

by Dorothy Manners

(Substituting for vacationing Louella Parsons)

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 30 (INS)—Shelley Winters has so many beaux in "Play Girl" it wasn't definite until today, when Barry Sullivan was signed, which one was to get her.

They should pull pretty well in co-star harness having just finished "Executive Suite" together at MGM.

In addition to Barry, Shelley's leading men include Dick Long and Gregg Palmer.

Oddly enough, both Dick and Gregg are said to be carrying torches in private life. Dick's long romance with Suzan Ball has hit a snag. And Gregg and Jill Farber have called off wedding plans for reasons best known to themselves.

There are enough "Trilbys" scheduled for production to put you into a trance! British Producer George Minter comes along to say he's signed Robert Newton to play Svengali to an as yet unsigned Trilby starting in London in January!

Minter's version of the Du Maurier classic is ready to roll with script already completed by Noel Langley who will also direct, for Renown Pictures.

Warner Brothers just announced "Trilby" for Kathryn Grayson and James Mason. And Darryl Zanuck had a "Trilby" idea in mind — unless all this kills it.

Absolutely and positively no nightclub engagements for June Haver! This is the only type entertainment at which June is drawing the line. Otherwise she is ready, willing and able to come back to work.

Wouldn't you know that her agent, Ned Marin, is just being flooded with nightclub offers?

June prefers movies but will do television or radio. Later, she might be interested in a play.

She shakes her head, however, about talk involving her romantically with good looking merchant Joe Campbell. First, she wants to get back in stride with her career.

Chatter in Hollywood:

It's getting serious between Nora Flynn Haymes and Jennings Lang. I think I was in on the start of this romance in Palm Springs several weekends ago.

Nora had been going to parties with this beau or that one until one night at Scotty Rubin's her eyes met Jennings' "across a crowded room."

Next day they were playing tennis on the courts of the Racquet Club and apparently the "love" game has been going on ever since.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random:

Lana Turner is having her personal wardrobe designed by Norman Hartnell, favorite stylist of Queen Elizabeth. His skirts for Lana are 15 inches from the floor! The queen's are 12.

Terry Moore will be with Nicky Hilton at the Panhandle dinner at the Ambassador Wednesday night.

Steve Cochran is being paged for "Sweet Poison" the Broadway show starring Maria Riva, Marlene's daughter. First, Steve has a date with a Los Angeles judge the 2nd of December to explain some erratic driving.

Love the story Norman Taurog tells about his 9-year-old Johnny, ardent member of the Cub Scouts: Johnny came home and told his father that 9-year-old Jeff Tone (Franchot's boy) had called his a "dirty, lowdown, no good Cub Scout." Johnny said to Norman, "Daddy, I don't think he should talk that way about the Cub Scouts, do you?"

Bob Neal is telling the world he's really gone on Debbie Reynolds—and he couldn't take his eyes off her at Ciro's the other night.

Shelley Winters with Michael Rennie and Tony Quinn enjoying Italian food at the Capri. Their respective mates are out of town.

That's all today. See you tomorrow.

Hearing Postponed

A hearing scheduled yesterday in Police Court for 12 persons involved in a melee last Friday near the strike-bound National Jet Company plant has been postponed until next Monday.

The hearing was postponed due to a number of city officials being required to appear in a case in Washington County Circuit Court at Hagerstown.

Do you frown when you talk? Do you grimace with your mouth? Wrinkles are sure to be the results.

Secrets Of Charm

by John Robert Powers

"Is there any sure way to get rid of wrinkles around the mouth?" "What will erase frown or thinking lines between the brows?" These reader questions are related, distant though the lines are in the face.

In the first place, such lines indicate that you are expressing your thoughts with more than just your voice and your eyes. It is desirable to keep your eyes and lips as flexible as possible, but when you bring the rest of your face into the act, you are guilty of grimacing. Keep the rest of your face calm; keep it placid. Let your eyes, your voice and your choice of words convey your thoughts and meaning to others.

While you are improving your habits, eradicate the lines that have already formed. Here's how:

Be sure to keep the lined areas well-lubricated. Dip your fingers into a rich cream and then lightly, with a feather touch, stroke upward and outward over the lines. Allow the cream to remain on as long as you can.

Eradicating Lines

Now for special work:

In the case of frown lines, cut a piece of court plaster to fit the area between your eye brows and extend it about a half inch down the nose and up your forehead. Wear it whenever you are alone. After you have worn the plaster a number of times you will become conscious of the area in which it was placed to such extent that you will find yourself constantly trying to keep from frowning. Persevere and you will succeed and regain the smooth, young-looking brow that you covet.

For Mouth Lines

In the case of lines around the mouth, chew gum, whenever you are alone a whole package at once. This will force your cheeks, chin and lip areas to extend, smoothing out the lines. Also, at least once each hour, yawn as deeply and as widely as you can. Alternate these yawns by blowing against your lips with as much force as you can muster.

As a further reminder to all of you who have unwanted lines in your face, keep a mirror in your living room and a chair so placed that your eye can catch a glimpse of your image now and then whenever you are in conversation. Another mirror placed near the telephone will enable you to study and check your impulse to talk "with your whole face."

Everyone loves a person who is alight and animated. But never forget—the lighting should be in the eyes and the animation in the voice!

YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE

You can achieve an appealing, resonant, sonorous voice — one that can be a vibrant attribute to charm and success—by reading the new booklet, YOUR MOST ATTRACTIVE VOICE, which gives complete instructions on how to overcome such wearisome speaking qualities as tonelessness, dullness and lack of proper modulation. Write to Secrets of Charm in care of this newspaper, enclosing 10c in coin, plus stamped, self-addressed envelope.

"Don't you have one in which the flatfoot outwits the private eye?"

viously had served as chief of staff to General Eisenhower in Europe and then became ambassador to Moscow, where Davies was a member of the embassy staff—was up for confirmation as undersecretary of state, he testified publicly on February 4, 1953, before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Several senators asked him about the Davies case. He stated that the episode had occurred before he took the directorship of the CIA, and that his impressions were gained from such records as were available, and that he had not talked with Davies. He said the Davies proposal theoretically might have worked but that his predecessor, Admiral Hillenkoetter, became alarmed and rejected it.

Undersecretary Smith testified that he was unable "to assess the motive" of Davies in proposing the plan, but that George F. Kennan, under whom Davies was serving at the time in the State Department, had written a letter to the loyalty board saying he felt some responsibility for Davies' work, though Kennan "did not specifically underwrite the Davies recommendation." Davies himself testified that the specific plan he advanced was not based on any direct instructions from anyone else.

Notwithstanding the friendly nature of Mr. Smith's testimony and the fact that the loyalty review board of the Truman administration last January formally stated that it had not found any ground to declare Davies ineligible for government service on loyalty grounds, Senator Jenner again wrote the Department of Justice on June 11, 1953, asking that the perjury indictment against Davies be pressed. William P. Rogers, deputy attorney general, wrote Senator Jenner on July 6, 1953, that the department was making a review of the case and had not reached any "final determination." The letters were made public last August.

Still Not Settled

That's where the matter rests today. It has not been clarified or settled, and Senator McCarthy was right in saying that John Paton Davies is still in government service, despite the testimony rendered against him. It is to be noted that the President's loyalty review board was never authorized to pass on any questions of "security," and in its letter to the State Department the board intimated that it questioned Davies' judgement. Subsequently Davies, who had been serving as deputy high commissioner in Germany, was transferred by Secretary of State Dulles to the American embassy in Peru, where he now is charge d'affaires. At one time Davies was ordered home from China at the request of Ambassador Hurley because of the latter's charge that Davies was too friendly to the Communist cause in China.

There is talk of another security investigation by the State Department, which it is reported Davies himself may formally request in order to clear up the matter.

Meanwhile Senator McCarthy stands wrongfully accused by "top White House staff members" who—though three days have elapsed since the attack attributed to them was broadcast to newspapers in every community — have not yet disavowed the several untruths which they allegedly inspired.

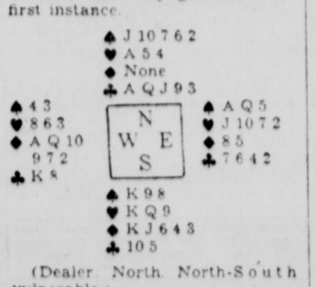
Barclay On Bridge

EXPENSIVE GOOD LUCK

"THAT putt is going to cost you many times the bet you won by sinking it." This wisdom, from a pro to whom the duffer was boasting, really struck home, so that this particular golfer decided then and there never to bet on sinking another putt. But there are plenty of cases of bridge players, having succeeded with a particular kind of gambling bid or play, who become firm addicts of such measures. In the long run they lose many more points, because of their initial success, than they gained in the first instance.



(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♠	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	6 ♦	Dbl.
6 ♠	Dbl.

North's crazy bid of 1-Diamond to open this deal was made on the most dangerous kind of hand with which to try such tactics. With two amply biddable suits, it nearly always pays to show one of them first, with the idea of revealing the other next, and then later on perhaps rebidding the lower to show that both are rebiddable. That gives your partner a choice of possible fits, or may-be No Trump if he has the other suits stopped adequately.

North didn't worry so much about his danger when South disclosed a lot of diamonds with his jump raise of the suit. He calmly enough bid his clubs, albeit at the lofty four level. But, when South then jumped to 6-Diamonds, feeling that North's club bid was the shower of an ace or blank, the original psychic bidder was in a bad spot. He might have accepted his punishment if West had passed, but the double impelled him to take out into his other black suit with 6-Spades, which East of course doubled.

Now came the only truly fine action of the deal, South's wise pass. As luck would have it, North made his contract after the diamond 8 was led by East, as only one trick was lost, to the spade A.

Would you consider North extremely lucky? If so, you would be wrong. The success of this insanity led to his becoming a confirmed psychic bidder, who has lost in later debacles many times what he won on this deal.

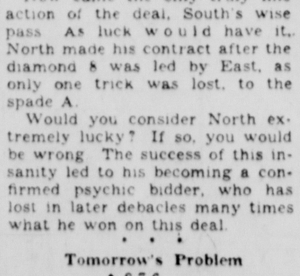
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: West. Both sides vulnerable.)

What bidding do you think should follow West's opening 1-Club on this tournament deal?

GRIN AND BEAR IT — By Lichty

"I'm not sulking up here . . . with everything uncertain these days it does a man good to be reminded that SOME things endure through the years."

There are four major "aerial rivers" for birds migrating over the United States. These are the Atlantic, the Mississippi, the Central and the Pacific. Although birds probably have used these routes since the end of the Ice Age, man still is uncertain as to how they follow their precise schedules and paths of flight.

EXPENSIVE GOOD LUCK

"THAT putt is going to cost you many times the bet you won by sinking it." This wisdom, from a pro to whom the duffer was boasting, really struck home, so that this particular golfer decided then and there never to bet on sinking another putt. But there are plenty of cases of bridge players, having succeeded with a particular kind of gambling bid or play, who become firm addicts of such measures. In the long run they lose many more points, because of their initial success, than they gained in the first instance.

(Dealer: North. North-South vulnerable.)

North	East	South	West
1 ♦	Pass	3 ♦	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	6 ♦	Dbl.
6 ♠	Dbl.

North's crazy bid of 1-Diamond to open this deal was made on the most dangerous kind of hand with which to try such tactics. With two amply biddable suits, it nearly always pays to show one of them first, with the idea of revealing the other next, and then later on perhaps rebidding the lower to show that both are rebiddable. That gives your partner a choice of possible fits, or may-be No Trump if he has the other suits stopped adequately.

North didn't worry so much about his danger when South disclosed a lot of diamonds with his jump raise of the suit. He calmly enough bid his clubs, albeit at the lofty four level. But, when South then jumped to 6-Diamonds, feeling that North's club bid was the shower of an ace or blank, the original psychic bidder was in a bad spot. He might have accepted his punishment if West had passed, but the double impelled him to take out into his other black suit with 6-Spades, which East of course doubled.

Now came the only truly fine action of the deal, South's wise pass. As luck would have it, North made his contract after the diamond 8 was led by East, as only one trick was lost, to the spade A.

Would you consider North extremely lucky? If so, you would be wrong. The success of this insanity led to his becoming a confirmed psychic bidder, who has lost in later debacles many times what he won on this deal.

CHRYSLER
SPECIAL SPECIAL

1951 CHRYSLER New Yorker Newport. How would you like to own the most sensational car in your area. To have an automobile with over 180 HP (and economical too); to be driving a beautiful deep rich red hard top convertible with customized Highlander Plaid interior. A prominent local man was the one owner and only drove 17,000 miles since buying this $4000 machine. Listing some of the equipment, it has large heater and air-conditioner — air foam seats — undercoated — backup lights — directional lights — 4 new nylon tires — wonderful power brakes — 2 speed electric wipers — safety rim wheels — and lest we forget the powerful Torque converter with 4 speed forward transmission. This car will be kept garaged but we hope to have you in for a view and a demonstration.

CHRYSLER
SPECIAL SPECIAL

1951 CHRYSLER New Yorker Newport. How would you like to own the most sensational car in your area. To have an automobile with over 180 HP (and economical too); to be driving a beautiful deep rich red hard top convertible with customized Highlander Plaid interior. A prominent local man was the one owner and only drove 17,000 miles since buying this $4000 machine. Listing some of the equipment, it has large heater and air-conditioner — air foam seats — undercoated — backup lights — directional lights — 4 new nylon tires — wonderful power brakes — 2 speed electric wipers — safety rim wheels — and lest we forget the powerful Torque converter with 4 speed forward transmission. This car will be kept garaged but we hope to have you in for a view and a demonstration.

Market Advance Bolsters Hopes For Extended Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP) — The stock market advanced stoutly today for the second straight session and bolstered Wall Street hopes for an extended year-end rally.

The close was vigorous with most prices right around their best of the day. Gains went to between 1 and 2 points in many cases with some pushing past that level. Losses, which were outnumbered two-to-one by the gains, seldom went to as much as a point.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained 80 cents at $109.50, a point equal to the peak of the mid-summer rally reach on Aug. 12.

The industrial component of the average added 60 cents, the rails were up $1.10, and utilities were up 30 cents.

Marvelous Tom Chatterton Is Recalled By Canadian's "War Experiences" Hoax

This old drawing depicts Chatterton's suicide. Note the vial of arsenic fallen to the floor.

By M. E. BYRNE
Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper

IN THE FURORE over the spurious "memoirs" of a Canadian recently published and sold under the impression they were the factual experiences of a member of the French underground in World War II, some of the commentators called it the "greatest literary hoax in history."

Like fun it was!

That dubious honor can belong to none other than Thomas Chatterton, a marvelous boy who lived briefly in the mid-Eighteenth Century.

Chatterton, a lad in his teens, aped the language and style of the Fifteenth Century so perfectly that he fooled experts in believing that "ancient manuscripts" he produced were genuine and not forgeries born of an amazing brain.

The posthumous son of a Bristol, England, schoolmaster, Young Tom had just barely learned to read when he came across some old deeds and papers in an antique chest in the church of St. Mary Redfield, where an uncle was sexton.

THE LITTLE BOY taught himself the antique idiom in which the papers were written and the times of which they told so captured his imagination that he could not resist writing a "Fifteenth Century" duologue, or conversation piece between two persons, Elinoure and Juga.

This first forgery was written when Tom was only 11 years old. To his immense delight, he was believed when he offered it as a Fifteenth Century manuscript which he happened to "find" in the church chest.

Thomas Chatterton the child.

Chatterton next did a whole series of manuscripts supposedly written by an imaginary Fifteenth Century monk named Thomas Rowley. Expert antiquarians and highly-placed scholars swallowed these colossal phonies hook, line and sinker. Even the great Horace Walpole, the fourth earl of Oxford and one of the top literary lights of the day, fell for the teenage Thomas' fakeries.

Among the pieces he produced were such magnificently done literary items as The Parliament of Sprites, Aella, The Tournament, Goddwyn, The Battle of Hastings, Bristowe Tragedie or the Dethe of Syr Charles Bawdin, The Balade of Charitie all in antique poetry of rere beauty.

Had the Chatterton writing come as the acknowledged work of a seasoned master they would stand very high among literary works. The added fact that they were done by a boy not yet 18 years old is almost unbelievable.

Chatterton did a coat-of-arms on a piece of parchment which he palmed off to a gullible townsman as the dupe's own family pedigree, which young Thomas claimed he had found in the old chest. For this he received the magnificent sum of five shillings (about 65 cents!)

YOUNG TOM had no trouble getting his fakeries accepted for publication but the pay was pitifully small and slow.

On the day before Easter in 1770 he contemplated suicide and wrote down a last will and testament in which he made a number of farcical bequests—willing his religion to a church dean, his modesty to the townsman with the fake family tree and his humility (Ah, there, Arthur!) to the pastor of his church.

Chatterton removed to London but his financial luck was no better there. He faced starvation and thus, on Aug. 24, 1770, he put an end to an existence which to him had become a farce, by downing a cocktail of arsenic.

Brilliant to the end, the epitaph which he wrote himself was engraved on his tombstone in St. Mary Redcliffe churchyard. It reads:

"To the memory of Thomas Chatterton. Reader, judge not. If thou art a Christian believe that he shall be judged by a Superior Power. To that Power only is he answerable."

Market Advance Bolsters Hopes For Extended Rally

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP) — The stock market advanced stoutly today for the second straight session and bolstered Wall Street hopes for an extended year-end rally.

The close was vigorous with most prices right around their best of the day. Gains went to between 1 and 2 points in many cases with some pushing past that level. Losses, which were outnumbered two-to-one by the gains, seldom went to as much as a point.

The Associated Press average of 60 stocks gained 80 cents at $109.50, a point equal to the peak of the mid-summer rally reach on Aug. 12.

The industrial component of the average added 60 cents, the rails were up $1.10, and utilities were up 30 cents.

Marvelous Tom Chatterton Is Recalled By Canadian's "War Experiences" Hoax

This old drawing depicts Chatterton's suicide. Note the vial of arsenic fallen to the floor.

By M. E. BYRNE
Written Especially for Central Press and This Newspaper

IN THE FUROR over the spurious "memoirs" of a Canadian recently published and sold under the impression they were the factual experiences of a member of the French underground in World War II, some of the commentators called it the "greatest literary hoax in history."

Like fun it was!

That dubious honor can belong to none other than Thomas Chatterton, a marvelous boy who lived briefly in the mid-Eighteenth Century.

Chatterton, a lad in his teens, aped the language and style of the Fifteenth Century so perfectly that he fooled experts in believeing that "ancient manuscripts" he produced were genuine and not forgeries born of an amazing brain.

The posthumous son of a Bristol, England, schoolmaster, Young Tom had just barely learned to read when he came across some old deeds and papers in an antique chest in the church of St. Mary Redfield, where an uncle was sexton.

THE LITTLE BOY taught himself the antique idiom in which the papers were written and the times of which they told so captured his imagination that he could not resist writing a "Fifteenth Century" duologue, or conversation piece between two persons, Elinours and Juga.

This first forgery was written when Tom was only 11 years old. To his immense delight, he was believed when he offered it as a Fifteenth Century manuscript which he happened to "find" in the church chest.

Thomas Chatterton the child.

Chatterton next did a whole series of manuscripts supposedly written by an imaginary Fifteenth Century monk named Thomas Rowley. Expert antiquarians and highly-placed scholars swallowed these colossal phonies hook, line and sinker. Even the great Horace Walpole, the fourth earl of Oxford and one of the top literary lights of the day, fell for the teenage Thomas' fakeries.

Among the pieces he produced were such magnificently done literary items as The Parliament of Sprites, Aella, The Tournament, Goddwyn, The Battle of Hastings, Bristowe Tragedie or the Dethe of Syr Charles Bawdin, The Balade of Charitie all in antique poetry of rere beauty.

Had the Chatterton writing come as the acknowledged work of a seasoned master they would stand very high among literary works. The added fact that they were done by a boy not yet 18 years old is almost unbelievable.

Chatterton did a coat-of-arms on a piece of parchment which he palmed off to a gullible townsman as the dupe's own family pedigree, which young Thomas claimed he had found in the old chest. For this he received the magnificent sum of five shillings (about 65 cents!)

YOUNG TOM had no trouble getting his fakeries accepted for publication but the pay was pitifully small and slow.

On the day before Easter in 1770 he contemplated suicide and wrote down a last will and testament in which he made a number of farcical bequests—willing his religion to a church dean, his modesty to the townsman with the fake family tree and his humility (Ah, there, Arthur!) to the pastor of his church.

Chatterton removed to London but his financial luck was no better there. He faced starvation and thus, on Aug. 24, 1770, he put an end to an existence which to him had become a farce, by downing a cocktail of arsenic

MISS KAZUKO YAMADA

Young Japanese Violinist To Perform Here Tonight

By BERNARD E. SITTER

Kazuko Yamada, talented young violinist who will appear here tonight, says Americans are "wonderful," but she plans to continue her musical career in her native Japan as soon as her studies in the U. S. are completed.

Miss Yamada will be featured soloist in tonight's opening concert of the Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra's 1953-54 season. The performance is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. at Allegany High School auditorium.

Earlier in the day, at a noon luncheon-meeting, the Rotary Club will hear selections from Miss Yamada's classical and semi-classical evening program.

Patterson Avenue residents heard a similar preview last night as Miss Yamada and her accompanist, Peter Schumacher of Cumberland, rehearsed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Swearingen. Mrs. Swearingen, a past president of the Music and Arts Club and long active in Maryland music circles, invited the young artist to her home before she arrived in the city yesterday.

Began Studies Early

Miss Yamada, 23 and charming, has been playing violin ever since she was a six-year-old schoolgirl in Yokohama. She soon decided she wanted to be a concert violinist, and the ambition was encouraged by her father, an accomplished cellist and then director of a musical conservatory, and by her mother, who plays the organ.

After being graduated from her father's conservatory, and later from the Tokyo Academy of Music, she returned to the Academy for two years of postgraduate work before coming to the States in October 1952.

Miss Yamada landed in the States with all of half a dozen English words at her command. She immediately began to study the language with a tutor (an hour a week), but had little opportunity

Local 1024 Will Start Vocational Student Award

Carpenters' Union Offers Membership

Local 1024, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, will honor one outstanding senior in woodworking from the Allegany County public school system each year, according to George A. Brown, financial secretary of Local 1024 and chairman of the union's committee which instituted the plan.

Beginning with the graduation next June, the carpenters' local plans to acknowledge the outstanding woodworker enrolled in the vocational course in Allegany County. He may come from Fort Hill, Carver, Beall or Bruce high school.

The winner will receive a free membership in the union, will be taken in as an apprentice and will be given a kit of tools.

Selection of the award will be made on a three-fold plan, probably in May. The vocational course instructors in each of the four schools offering the program will recommend the outstanding woodworker among the seniors enrolled in the vocational education program. Each school representative will be called upon to submit samples of his work and finally the boys will take an aptitude test.

Only seniors are eligible. They must have reached their 17th birthday, must not be planning to go to college and must be enrolled in the vocational course.

Members of the Local 1024 committee which evolved the woodworking honor in addition to Brown are Ralph E. Porter, local president; Louis A. Firlie, a trustee; Joseph Mullenax, a trustee, and F. Patrick Allender.

J. D. Lonnholm, supervisor of vocational, industrial and adult education in the Allegany County public schools, is working with the Local 1024 committee in instituting the new program.

Superintendent of Schools Ralph R. Webster also has added his endorsement to the project.

Mildred Willison Returns To Work

Miss Mildred Willison, one of the three elementary supervisors for Allegany County public schools, returned to work yesterday after an absence of 10 weeks.

Miss Willison fell down one concrete step in front of the Board of Education Building Monday, September 21, breaking a bone in her left foot. For weeks she was required to use crutches and more recently has walked with the assistance of a cane.

Involuntary Manslaughter Charge Filed Against Young W. Va. Hunter

First Day Deer Season Chalks Up Accidents

Five Reported Dead; Seven Are Injured

A 17-year-old West Virginia boy was held on $5,000 bond in Randolph County jail in Elkins last night on a charge of involuntary manslaughter following the fatal wounding of another in a hunting accident yesterday near the Tucker-Randolph county line on Shaver's Fork of Pheasant Run.

The mishap was the first of several hunting accidents which occurred on the opening of the three-day deer season in nearby West Virginia counties.

Tony Tarley, Four States, W. Va., admitted to authorities he had fired the shot which killed Norris Talmadge Wilson, 30, of Piedmont, Ohio, and wounded a companion, Stanley Van Fossen, 53, also of Piedmont.

First Sgt. E. L. Roush of Company C of West Virginia State Police with headquarters in Elkins, investigated the shooting which occurred about 7 a. m. yesterday. Assisting Roush were Trooper James Rightmire of the Thomas detachment of the State Police and Robert Maxwell, prosecuting attorney of Randolph County.

Roush said Tarley was held in Elkins County Jail following a preliminary hearing before Justice G. D. Doyle yesterday afternoon on the manslaughter charge when the youth was unable to post bond.

The youth will appear for a hearing Thursday at 10 a. m. in Juvenile Court on the charge, Roush continued.

Visibility Was Good

Roush said witnesses told authorities Wilson and Van Fossen were hunting on Shaver's Fork near the county line in a party of six which included Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips, Parsons, W. Va., Charles Owens, Piedmont, Ohio, and Howard Shaffer, Steubenville, Ohio, formerly of Parsons.

The party was walking single file along a beaten path, Roush continued, when it came to a small knoll. Tarley, a member of another hunting party, was stationed alone at a deer stand about 160 feet on the other side of the knoll.

The slug from a 12-gauge shotgun pierced the right arm of Van Fossen, who was leading the party, narrowly missed Shaffer, who was walking behind Van Fossen, and truck Wilson in the chest, killing him almost instantly.

Tarley later told authorities he panicked when he realized what had happened, and ran away. He later gave himself up to police in the Tucker County Court House in Parsons.

Phillips and Shaffer attempted to aid Wilson but the Piedmont man died almost immediately. The party then took Van Fossen to Tucker County Hospital in Parsons for medical attention, notifying authorities of the accident. Attaches at the hospital said Van Fossen was in "good" condition as the shotgun slug had missed the bone, having gone cleanly through the man's arm.

When it was discovered the shooting had occurred across the line in Randolph County, Elkins police were notified and began their investigation.

Youth Badly Upset

They found Wilson's body where the hunting party had left it and took it to the Lohr Funeral Home in Elkins where the medical examiner will issue the death certificate. No inquest was held.

Tarley, one of nine children whose father died two years ago, came to Parsons about an hour and a half after the shooting occurred and turned himself in. He appeared very nervous and was in a state of shock, police said. He was treated at the hospital where he remained until yesterday afternoon before being taken to Elkins by Sgt. Roush.

Roush said Tarley later told him he had thought the Wilson party was a whole herd of deer approaching. He said he became excited and began to shoot the instant he saw something move. When he realized what had happened, the boy ran away, but later asked a group of hunters whom he did not know to take him to Parsons, where he surrendered to authorities.

Wilson is survived by his wife, the former Anna May Hughes, and three children, Catherine, Carol and Harry. The Ohio man owned a drive-in-theater at Cadiz, Ohio.

Also a patient in Tucker County Hospital is Mrs. Mary Marie Martin, 36-year-old veteran hunter from Charleston who formerly resided in Parsons. Mrs. Martin was hit in the left thigh by a stray slug thought to be from a 12-gauge shotgun, authorities said.

Mrs. Martin, a sister-in-law of Fielding Kyer, former Tucker County conservation officer, told police she was in a hunting party which included her husband, Al Martin, and a cousin, Charles Shields.

The two men had advanced ahead of the woman, who was sitting under a tree. A slug went through her leg just as she began to rise from the ground.

The woman said she then fired

Jaycees To Hear GOC Coordinator Tomorrow Night

Smith To Receive Honorary Membership

Charles G. Smith, Allegany County coordinator for the Ground Observer Corps, will discuss the County Civil Defense program at the dinner meeting of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

For his outstanding community service, Smith will receive a certificate of honorary membership in the Jaycees from Raymond C. Dorn, Jaycee president.

Both the state Jaycee president and the vice-president for Western Maryland are also expected to attend the dinner meeting here. Roland Hebb of Hagerstown is president and Lloyd K. Hoover of Frederick is vice-president.

Since taking over the GOC duties here in April, 1950, Smith has expanded the group from a "paper" organization to a membership of 600 volunteers and six observer posts located in Cumberland, Frostburg, Cresaptown, Pinto, Bedford Road and Oldtown. All of this has been done while Smith has held down a fulltime job in the production control department of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company.

The county GOC unit leads the Pittsburgh Filter Center district which embraces parts of Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Smith received a Freedom's Foundation certificate July 22 from Governor Theodore R. McKeldin for his outstanding Ground Observer Corps work. Freedom's Foundation annually acknowledges outstanding contributions to understanding of the American way of life. He was one of two Marylanders so honored and among a group of only 65 from throughout the United States.

County To File Detainers On Rawlings Youths

The State's Attorney's Office reported detainers will be placed against three Rawlings area youths who were turned over to West Virginia authorities yesterday after they waived extradition in Circuit Court.

The 17-year-old youths, Daniel Gordon, Kelly W. Pennington and Gordon Leavitt, were taken into custody here Saturday by State Police Trooper Milton G. Hart, for authorities at Keyser, on charges of tampering with motor vehicles in that city.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said the youths admitted ransacking several cars in Cumberland last week of tires, tubes, wheels and tool kits.

One admitted, he said, of taking a pocketbook in Cumberland with another youth who is still at large.

Authorities said warrants will be sent to West Virginia authorities so the trio will be returned here.

217 Get Marriage Permits Last Month

Some 217 marriage licenses were issued in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Allegany County Circuit Court, in November but it marked the fourth successive month that the number issued has fallen behind the corresponding month of 1952.

November's total was 18 fewer that in November, 1952, when 235 were distributed from Boden's office. It was the lowest total since March, a Lenten month, when only 206 were issued.

During the first 11 months this year 2,780 licenses for marriage have been issued in Allegany County, some 91 below the 11-month total of 2,871 a year ago. It appears probable that the total authorized for the entire calendar year will reach 3,000 but it is not expected to near the 1952 total of 3,121, when 250 were issued in December.

State Fringes Storm Area, No Freeze Expected

A light snow which fell yesterday in Garrett County was expected to bring scattered light rains, possibly mixed with snow, to other sections of the state today.

The Weather Bureau said last night Maryland is on the southern boundary or fringe of the snow storm.

Approximately one-half inch of snow fell yesterday morning in Garrett County but Cumberland had only a few flurries and slight precipitation which caused the streets to glisten wetly for several hours.

During the past 24 hours the high temperature was 41 degrees and the low 32 degrees. At 8 o'clock last night the mercury read 37.

The office of the district engineer for the State Roads Commission said there was between one-half inch to an inch of snow in Garrett County yesterday with roads at one time about 75 per cent covered. Later the engineer states he was not recommending chains, indicating the barometer was rising and the SRC was not looking for any rough weather.

Eight crews were out working in Garrett yesterday, cindering and salting in the wake of the snow and sleet there. Two crews were called out for work in the western part of Allegany County. Last night the SRC indicated all roads were clear and drying, but it was still snowing, and State Police were advising motorists to use chains west of Frostburg.

Roads elsewhere in Maryland and the tri-state area were dry.

Temperatures in most areas of the state were expected to remain above freezing today with possible light rain or snowfall in the mountains.

The Weather

Yesterday's temperatures were moderate with a slight precipitation wetting the streets in the early morning hours. High for the day was recorded at 41 degrees by the official weather bureau in Constitution Park. Low was 32 and at 8 p. m. the mercury registered 37 degrees. Humidity at 6 p. m. was a high 76 per cent. Forecast for today is partly cloudy with moderate temperatures, some light rain or snow in the mountains. Tomorrow will see little change.

Local Man Fined $1,000; Freed Pending Appeal

Thomas Neff Found Innocent By Jury

Leonard "Chick" Little, 55-year-old Cumberland pool room operator, drew a six-months term in the House of Correction and was fined $1,000 after he was found guilty on bookmaking charges yesterday by a Washington County jury in Hagerstown which deliberated only 40 minutes.

The jury later found one of his employes innocent of the same charge of taking race horse bets.

Little was freed on $5,000 bail when defense counsel indicated an appeal was under consideration.

Neff Is Found Innocent

A handyman in Little's pool room, Thomas Neff, 50, was found innocent by the jury which deliberated only 15 minutes. The only evidence against Neff was that he was seen by special state police investigators taking money from a man. They said it was their impression he was taking a bet although he refused to take one from them.

Charges against a third defendent, Edward Capel, about 50, were dropped when it was learned he was seriously ill.

The three were accused of gambling law violations in August of 1952 after a special investigation by state police and were indicted in Circuit Court here by the October 1952 grand jury. The trials were moved to Hagerstown on the motion of defense attorneys, Harold E. Naughton and Charles E. Wagaman.

The investigation was carried out by Murray Jackson and Thomas Smith, at that time state police sergeants, who testified at Little's trial they placed $5 and $2 bets on horses at Little's pool room.

Wagaman, who is from Hagerstown, objected to the introduction of testimony by the former state policemen stating that the State Police cannot investigate in municipalities except on request by the chief police officer of a community. He claimed Police Chief R. Emmett Flynn of Cumberland did not make such a request for a probe and that under the Maryland Code the evidence obtained was not admissible.

Judge Overrules Motion

Judge Mish overruled the defense motion that the state policemen had acted contrary to the Code after Cumberland Police Commissioner John J. Long testified he wrote to State Police Superintendent Elmer Munshower in April of 1952 asking state police help. Munshower verified the request but defense counsel contended Long was not the chief police officer.

However, Judge Mish, turned down the motion holding that in the liberal interpretation Long is the chief officer in Cumberland.

Thomas B. Finan, Cumberland city attorney, testified he had conferred with Long in connection with the calling in of the state police officers and knew in advance of the pending probe.

Jackson, now an investigator for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said he and Smith came to Cumberland and on August 9, 1952, went to the pool room on Liberty Street. He said a number of men were playing pool with others sitting around reading racing forms.

An elderly man, later identified by Jackson as Capel, came in and sat down to watch the pool players, the investigator continued.

Bets Are Placed

"I said I had a hunch on a race at Atlantic City and gave Capel $5 and Smith gave him $2 to bet on the horse," Jackson testified.

Capel went to the rear of the room and placed the bet through Little, Jackson went on, adding "the man gave us a slip of paper noting the bets."

Jackson then testified when he and Smith went back to get their money after the horse had been scratched, and to place new bets, Capel spoke up to Neff and Little and said, "Yeah, these are the two guys."

Neff then asked them if they knew anyone in Cumberland and if they had any identification, Jackson said. When the two men said they were from out of town, Neff told them, "That's too bad, get somebody to identify you."

Jackson said he and Smith had purchased a copy of a paper which carried racing news to show where the horse on which they bet had been scratched. He told the court he noticed numerous persons coming in and out of the pool room and going to the back counter. He said many had racing forms.

Hyndman Man Pays Overloading Fine

John R. Clites, Hyndman, Pa., was fined $24.75 in Trial Magistrates Court yesterday on a charge of overloading the second axle of a sand truck by 1,400 pounds.

Clites pleaded guilty to the charge preferred before Magistrate Donald W. Mason by Patrolman John J. Devlin.

MISS KAZUKO YAMADA

By BERNARD E. SITTER

Kazuko Yamada, talented young violinist who will appear here tonight, says Americans are "wonderful," but she plans to continue her musical career in her native Japan as soon as her studies in the U. S. are completed.

Miss Yamada will be featured soloist in tonight's opening concert of the Cumberland Civic Symphony Orchestra's 1953-54 season. The performance is scheduled for 8:15 p. m. at Allegany High School auditorium.

Earlier in the day, at a noon luncheon-meeting, the Rotary Club will hear selections from Miss Yamada's classical and semi-classical evening program.

Patterson Avenue residents heard a similar preview last night as Miss Yamada and her accompanist, Peter Schumacher of Cumberland, rehearsed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Swearingen. Mrs. Swearingen, a past president of the Music and Arts Club and long active in Maryland music circles, invited the young artist to her home before she arrived in the city yesterday.

Began Studies Early

Miss Yamada, 23 and charming, has been playing violin ever since she was a six-year-old schoolgirl in Yokohama. She soon decided she wanted to be a concert violinist, and the ambition was encouraged by her father, an accomplished cellist and then director of a musical conservatory, and by her mother, who plays the organ.

After being graduated from her father's conservatory, and later from the Tokyo Academy of Music, she returned to the Academy for two years of postgraduate work before coming to the States in October 1952.

Miss Yamada landed in the States with all of half a dozen English words at her command. She immediately began to study the language with a tutor (an hour a week), but had little opportunity

Local 1024 Will Start Vocational Student Award

Carpenters' Union Offers Membership

Local 1024, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America, will honor one outstanding senior in woodworking from the Allegany County public school system each year, according to George A. Brown, financial secretary of Local 1024 and chairman of the union's committee which instituted the plan.

Beginning with the graduation next June, the carpenters' local plans to acknowledge the outstanding woodworker enrolled in the vocational course in Allegany County. He may come from Fort Hill, Carver, Beall or Bruce high school.

The winner will receive a free membership in the union, will be taken in as an apprentice and will be given a kit of tools.

Selection of the award will be made on a three-fold plan, probably in May. The vocational course instructors in each of the four schools offering the program will recommend the outstanding woodworker among the seniors enrolled in the vocational education program. Each school representative will be called upon to submit samples of his work and finally the boys will take an aptitude test.

Only seniors are eligible. They must have reached their 17th birthday, must not be planning to go to college and must be enrolled in the vocational course.

Members of the Local 1024 committee which evolved the woodworking honor in addition to Brown are Ralph E. Porter, local president; Louis A. Firlie, a trustee; Joseph Mullenax, a trustee, and F. Patrick Allender.

J. D. Lonnholm, supervisor of vocational, industrial and adult education in the Allegany County public schools, is working with the Local 1024 committee in instituting the new program.

Superintendent of Schools Ralph R. Webster also has added his endorsement to the project.

Mildred Willison Returns To Work

Miss Mildred Willison, one of the three elementary supervisors for Allegany County public schools, returned to work yesterday after an absence of 10 weeks.

Miss Willison fell down one concrete step in front of the Board of Education Building Monday, September 21, breaking a bone in her left foot. For weeks she was required to use crutches and more recently has walked with the assistance of a cane.

Involuntary Manslaughter Charge Filed Against Young W. Va. Hunter

First Day Deer Season Chalks Up Accidents

Five Reported Dead; Seven Are Injured

A 17-year-old West Virginia boy was held on $5,000 bond in Randolph County jail in Elkins last night on a charge of involuntary manslaughter following the fatal wounding of another in a hunting accident yesterday near the Tucker-Randolph county line on Shaver's Fork of Pheasant Run.

The mishap was the first of several hunting accidents which occurred on the opening of the three-day deer season in nearby West Virginia counties.

Tony Tarley, Four States, W. Va., admitted to authorities he had fired the shot which killed Norris Talmadge Wilson, 30, of Piedmont, Ohio, and wounded a companion, Stanley Van Fossen, 53, also of Piedmont.

First Sgt. E. L. Roush of Company C of West Virginia State Police with headquarters in Elkins, investigated the shooting which occurred about 7 a. m. yesterday. Assisting Roush were Trooper James Rightmire of the Thomas detachment of the State Police and Robert Maxwell, prosecuting attorney of Randolph County.

Roush said Tarley was held in Elkins County Jail following a preliminary hearing before Justice G. D. Doyle yesterday afternoon on the manslaughter charge when the youth was unable to post bond.

The youth will appear for a hearing Thursday at 10 a. m. in Juvenile Court on the charge, Roush continued.

Visibility Was Good

Roush said witnesses told authorities Wilson and Van Fossen were hunting on Shaver's Fork near the county line in a party of six which included Mr. and Mrs. James Phillips, Parsons, W. Va., Charles Owens, Piedmont, Ohio, and Howard Shaffer, Steubenville, Ohio, formerly of Parsons.

The party was walking single file along a beaten path, Roush continued, when it came to a small knoll. Tarley, a member of another hunting party, was stationed alone at a deer stand about 160 feet on the other side of the knoll.

As the Wilson party came into view of Tarley the youth immediately fired, although visibility at the time was good, Rousch explained.

The slug from a 12-gauge shotgun pierced the right arm of Van Fossen, who was leading the party, narrowly missed Shaffer, who was walking behind Van Fossen, and truck Wilson in the chest, killing him almost instantly.

Tarley later told authorities he panicked when he realized what had happened, and ran away. He later gave himself up to police in the Tucker County Court House in Parsons.

Phillips and Shaffer attempted to aid Wilson but the Piedmont man died almost immediately. The party then took Van Fossen to Tucker County Hospital in Parsons for medical attention, notifying authorities of the accident. Attaches at the hospital said Van Fossen was in "good" condition as the shotgun slug had missed the bone, having gone cleanly through the man's arm.

When it was discovered the shooting had occurred across the line in Randolph County, Elkins police were notified and began their investigation.

Youth Badly Upset

They found Wilson's body where the hunting party had left it and took it to the Lohr Funeral Home in Elkins where the medical examiner will issue the death certificate. No inquest was held.

Tarley, one of nine children whose father died two years ago, came to Parsons about an hour and a half after the shooting occurred and turned himself in. He appeared very nervous and was in a state of shock, police said. He was treated at the hospital where he remained until yesterday afternoon before being taken to Elkins by Sgt. Roush.

Roush said Tarley later told him he had thought the Wilson party was a whole herd of deer approaching. He said he became excited and began to shoot the instant he saw something move. When he realized what had happened, the boy ran away, but later asked a group of hunters whom he did not know to take him to Parsons, where he surrendered to authorities.

Wilson is survived by his wife, the former Anna May Hughes, and three children, Catherine, Carol and Harry. The Ohio man owned a drive-in-theater at Cadiz, Ohio.

Also a patient in Tucker County Hospital is Mrs. Mary Marie Martin, 36-year-old veteran hunter from Charleston who formerly resided in Parsons. Mrs. Martin was hit in the left thigh by a stray slug thought to be from a 12-gauge shotgun, authorities said.

Mrs. Martin, a sister-in-law of Fielding Kyer, former Tucker County conservation officer, told police she was in a hunting party which included her husband, Al Martin, and a cousin, Charles Shields.

The two men had advanced ahead of the woman, who was sitting under a tree. A slug went through her leg just as she began to rise from the ground.

The woman said she then fired

Smith To Receive Honorary Membership

Charles G. Smith, Allegany County coordinator for the Ground Observer Corps, will discuss the County Civil Defense program at the dinner meeting of the Cumberland Junior Association of Commerce at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday at the Ali Ghan Shrine Country Club.

Both the state Jaycee president and the vice-president for Western Maryland are also expected to attend the dinner meeting here. Roland Hebb of Hagerstown is president and Lloyd K. Hoover of Frederick is vice-president.

Since taking over the GOC duties here in April, 1950, Smith has expanded the group from a "paper" organization to a membership of 600 volunteers and six observer posts located in Cumberland, Frostburg, Cresaptown, Pinto, Bedford Road and Oldtown. All of this has been done while Smith has held down a fulltime job in the production control department of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company.

The county GOC unit leads the Pittsburgh Filter Center district which embraces parts of Maryland, West Virginia, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

Smith received a Freedom's Foundation certificate July 22 from Governor Theodore R. McKeldin for his outstanding Ground Observer Corps work. County To File Detainers On Rawlings Youths

The State's Attorney's Office reported detainers will be placed against three Rawlings area youths who were turned over to West Virginia authorities yesterday after they waived extradition in Circuit Court.

The 17-year-old youths, Daniel Gordon, Kelly W. Pennington and Gordon Leavitt, were taken into custody here Saturday by State Police Trooper Milton G. Hart, for authorities at Keyser, on charges of tampering with motor vehicles in that city.

County Investigator Edwin R. Lilya said the youths admitted ransacking several cars in Cumberland last week of tires, tubes, wheels and tool kits.

One admitted, he said, of taking a pocketbook in Cumberland with another youth who is still at large.

Authorities said warrants will be sent to West Virginia authorities so the trio will be returned here.

217 Get Marriage Permits Last Month

Some 217 marriage licenses were issued in the office of Joseph E. Boden, clerk of Allegany County Circuit Court, in November but it marked the fourth successive month that the number issued has fallen behind the corresponding month of 1952.

November's total was 18 fewer that in November, 1952, when 235 were distributed from Boden's office. It was the lowest total since March, a Lenten month, when only 206 were issued.

During the first 11 months this year 2,780 licenses for marriage have been issued in Allegany County, some 91 below the 11-month total of 2,871 a year ago. It appears probable that the total authorized for the entire calendar year will reach 3,000 but it is not expected to near the 1952 total of 3,121, when 250 were issued in December.

State Fringes Storm Area, No Freeze Expected

A light snow which fell yesterday in Garrett County was expected to bring scattered light rains, possibly mixed with snow, to other sections of the state today.

The Weather Bureau said last night Maryland is on the southern boundary or fringe of the snow storm.

Approximately one-half inch of snow fell yesterday morning in Garrett County but Cumberland had only a few flurries and slight precipitation which caused the streets to glisten wetly for several hours.

During the past 24 hours the high temperature was 41 degrees and the low 32 degrees. At 8 o'clock last night the mercury read 37.

The office of the district engineer for the State Roads Commission said there was between one-half inch to an inch of snow in Garrett County yesterday with roads at one time about 75 per cent covered. Later the engineer states he was not recommending chains, indicating the barometer was rising and the SRC was not looking for any rough weather.

Eight crews were out working in Garrett yesterday, cindering and salting in the wake of the snow and sleet there. Two crews were called out for work in the western part of Allegany County. Last night the SRC indicated all roads were clear and drying, but it was still snowing, and State Police were advising motorists to use chains west of Frostburg.

Roads elsewhere in Maryland and the tri-state area were dry.

Temperatures in most areas of the state were expected to remain above freezing today with possible light rain or snowfall in the mountains.

The Weather

Yesterday's temperatures were moderate with a slight precipitation wetting the streets in the early morning hours. High for the day was recorded at 41 degrees by the official weather bureau in Constitution Park. Low was 32 and at 8 p. m. the mercury registered 37 degrees. Humidity at 6 p. m. was a high 76 per cent. Forecast for today is partly cloudy with moderate temperatures, some light rain or snow in the mountains. Tomorrow will see little change.

Local Man Fined $1,000; Freed Pending Appeal

Thomas Neff Found Innocent By Jury

Leonard "Chick" Little, 55-year-old Cumberland pool room operator, drew a six-months term in the House of Correction and was fined $1,000 after he was found guilty on bookmaking charges yesterday by a Washington County jury in Hagerstown which deliberated only 40 minutes.

The jury later found one of his employes innocent of the same charge of taking race horse bets.

Little was freed on $5,000 bail when defense counsel indicated an appeal was under consideration.

Neff Is Found Innocent

A handyman in Little's pool room, Thomas Neff, 50, was found innocent by the jury which deliberated only 15 minutes. The only evidence against Neff was that he was seen by special state police investigators taking money from a man. They said it was their impression he was taking a bet although he refused to take one from them.

Charges against a third defendent, Edward Capel, about 50, were dropped when it was learned he was seriously ill.

The three were accused of gambling law violations in August of 1952 after a special investigation by state police and were indicted in Circuit Court here by the October 1952 grand jury. The trials were moved to Hagerstown on the motion of defense attorneys, Harold E. Naughton and Charles E. Wagaman.

The investigation was carried out by Murray Jackson and Thomas Smith, at that time state police sergeants, who testified at Little's trial they placed $5 and $2 bets on horses at Little's pool room.

Wagaman, who is from Hagerstown, objected to the introduction of testimony by the former state policemen stating that the State Police cannot investigate in municipalities except on request by the chief police officer of a community. He claimed Police Chief R. Emmett Flynn of Cumberland did not make such a request for a probe and that under the Maryland Code the evidence obtained was not admissible.

Judge Overrules Motion

Judge Mish overruled the defense motion that the state policemen had acted contrary to the Code after Cumberland Police Commissioner John J. Long testified he wrote to State Police Superintendent Elmer Munshower in April of 1952 asking state police help. Munshower verified the request but defense counsel contended Long was not the chief police officer.

However, Judge Mish, turned down the motion holding that in the liberal interpretation Long is the chief officer in Cumberland.

Thomas B. Finan, Cumberland city attorney, testified he had conferred with Long in connection with the calling in of the state police officers and knew in advance of the pending probe.

Jackson, now an investigator for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee, said he and Smith came to Cumberland and on August 9, 1952, went to the pool room on Liberty Street. He said a number of men were playing pool with others sitting around reading racing forms.

An elderly man, later identified by Jackson as Capel, came in and sat down to watch the pool players, the investigator continued.

Bets Are Placed

"I said I had a hunch on a race at Atlantic City and gave Capel $5 and Smith gave him $2 to bet on the horse," Jackson testified.

Capel went to the rear of the room and placed the bet through Little, Jackson went on, adding "the man gave us a slip of paper noting the bets."

Jackson then testified when he and Smith went back to get their money after the horse had been scratched, and to place new bets, Capel spoke up to Neff and Little and said, "Yeah, these are the two guys."

Neff then asked them if they knew anyone in Cumberland and if they had any identification, Jackson said. When the two men said they were from out of town, Neff told them, "That's too bad, get somebody to identify you."

Jackson said he and Smith had purchased a copy of a paper which carried racing news to show where the horse on which they bet had been scratched. He told the court he noticed numerous persons coming in and out of the pool room and going to the back counter. He said many had racing forms.

Hyndman Man Pays Overloading Fine

Clites pleaded guilty to the charge preferred before Magistrate Donald W. Mason by Patrolman John J. Devlin.
